CARROLL D. WRIGHT DEAD

President Clark College and Former Commissioner of Labor Dies at Worcester, Mass.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 20.—Carroll D. Wright, president of Clark college and former commissioner of labor, died tonight aged 69 years. President Wright had been a sufferer from diabetes for more that two years, but that disease did not give him serious trouble until after his return from Washington on Dec. 7. His last public appearance was at the dinner of the trustees of the Carnegie institute, with which institute he had been connected for some years.

He was obliged to take to his bed four days after his return, but rallied within a week. Still he did not leave his room and conducted the administration of Clark college through his secretary. This continued for nearly two months, but ten days ago, complications set in and he was forced to relinquish all business, and since that time he has failed gradually. His physicians for several days have held out no hope for his recovery, and it was realized that death might be expected at [illegible] hourly. The condition of coma into which the patient had sunk in the last hours remained unbroken until the time of his death.

FAMOUS AMERICAN FLEET IS NOW ONLY FEW HOURS OFF THE COAST OF VIRGINIA

FORT MONROE, OLD POINT COMFORT, Va., Feb. 20.—When the saluting guns of the forward bridge of the armored cruiser North Carolina boomed 13 times today in honor of the blue flag of Rear Admiral Sperry on the Connecticut, the combined forces that are to enter the Virginia capes Monday morning, to be viewed by President Roosevelt in celebration of the world cruise of the American battleships were completed.

Wireless signals received from the North Carolina and her junior consort, the Montana, early today, told of the approach of the last two ships sent to welcome the home-coming vessels [illegible] the main body of the fleet. The wireless station at the Norfolk navy yard could not pick up the fleet direct either last night or today on account of static interference in the atmosphere, but the messages from the North Carolina were sufficient evidence that the fleet is near enough to the Virginia capes tonight to insure its arrival off the entrance to Hampton Roads some time tomorrow. The fleet will lay-to, or maneuver off the capes tomorrow afternoon and evening, and will get underway Monday morning in time to pass into home waters and begin filing by the Mayflower exactly at the hour indicated.

Messages Interfered With

Last night's static interference with the wireless and the inability of the apparatus to carry over great distances during the day have resulted in congestion of outgoing messages at the Norfolk station which probably will not be fully straightened out until the fleet actually is in port.

Scores of officers' wives are already at the hotels here. Among them are about nineteen who made the journey all the way around the world on merchant ships and who overtook or waited for the naval vessels at the various ports visited.

The social feature of the fleet's return and stay in the Roads is to be as notable as the departure.

Washington's birthday is to be celebrated as a holiday more generally than ever before in this section and all the residents of Norfolk, Newport News, Hampton and other cities who can possibly do so will either be afloat or gathered along the shores of the roadstead to witness the impressive arrival of the ships and the ceremonies attending the visit of the President.

[illegible] Cleared of Merchantmen

The man of war anchorage, stretching three miles in a crescent from the Old Point pier, was cleared today of all merchant ships. After the Mayflower leaves for Washington late Monday afternoon, however, excursion steamers will be allowed within the anchorage grounds and may [illegible] between the two long lines of 20 battleships and five big cruisers.

According to advices received here, the Georgia is not the only one of the 16 battleships that is coming home in command of executive officers. Captain Hamilton Hutchins, who sailed

YOUNG COOPER, CHARGED WITH MURDER, TELLS STORY OF SHOOTING OF CARMACK

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 20.—This was the defense's day in the trial of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp, charged with the murder of former United States Senator Edward W. Carmack. Thus [illegible] only one witness examined, the [illegible] defendant, Robin J. Cooper, and he [illegible] witness.

Robin Cooper is a slender, boyish, clean cut looking youth. He gave his age as 27, his profession as a lawyer. He said he was a son of D. B. Cooper, and knew John Sharp, the other defendant, very well. In a clear voice, and with the refined accent of the educated southern man, Cooper gave a brief sketch of his life. He said he lived with his uncle, James Bradford, of counsel for the defense, and practiced law in the latter's office. He said he came to town on Monday, November 9, with his uncle, Mr. Bradford, arriving at 9 o'clock a. m.

"Did you see your father that morning?"

"He [illegible] to my office [illegible] after he arrived. He came into Mr. Bradford's private office, where I was in conference with Mr. Davis."

Mrs. Burch Interested.

From the moment her favorite brother began to talk, Mrs. Burch leaned forward in her chair, looking steadily into his eyes, and seeming scarcely to breathe as he talked. Colonel Cooper, seated next to his younger daughter, Mrs. Wilson, sat back in his chair and apparently took little interest in the preliminary questions. When his son referred to him as "papa," the colonel smiled and played with his [illegible] The jury [illegible] interest.

"I waited a while and [illegible] me to [illegible] [illegible] he was going to have some trouble with Mr. Carmack."

"I object," said Attorney General McCarn. "It is a self-serving conversation, and is incompetent."

"Any conversation heard by Miss Lee is incompetent; and anything else is not," said the court.

"Relate the conversation."

"We object," shouted the state's attorneys.

"Sustained," said the court.

"You can explain the remarks heard only."

"Did your father make the remarks Miss Lee repeated?"

"He did."

"In what connection were they made?"

"They were made in reply to statements of mine. He said he was afraid of trouble. I asked him why. He said in substance, that Mr. Carmack in his paper, had been printing editorials attacking his character and, as he put it, [illegible] He said it was [illegible] the night before and [illegible]

PRESIDENT SANCTIONS VIOLATION OF THE SHERMAN LAW?

States Steel corporation purchased all the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company except $225,100, the amount of the stock acquired being $30,475,325. It was shown that only $642,666 in cash was paid for the stock and that bonds of the steel corporation were issued to the amount of $35,111,878, or nearly five million in excess of the par value of the Tennessee company stock purchased

Absorption Necessary, Roosevelt Said

The report quotes from the President's message declaring the absorption was necessary according to representations to him by Judge Gary and H C. Frick on behalf of the steel corporation, as a certain business firm of real importance in New York circles would undoubtedly fail unless the deal could be made. From testimony of a number of witnesses the report declares that the firm of Moore and Schley, stockbrokers of New York, was the one referred to by Messrs Gary and Frick, the concern which managed the affairs of a party of financiers who brought a majority of the stock of the Tennessee company and held it until November 1907.

It is asserted by the report that banks in New York, some of them known as Morgan banks, pressed the loans on Tennessee Coal company stock vigorously and that these demands were met successfully until, fearful of the result on account of the business uneasiness in regard to the Tennessee stock, offers were made with the steel corporation. It is asserted the syndicate did not wish to sell its stock, but was forced to do so

Steel Corporation in Control

Sarcastic references were made by the committee report to the statement of Judge Gary and Mr Frick in their interview with the President that they did not want to buy the Tennessee concern. From the testimony, it is asserted that the Tennessee property is worth probably several hundred million dollars and would give the steel corporation ultimate control of the iron ore supply of the country and the iron and steel trade of the south.

It is asserted by the committee that whatever may be the supposed emergency, no discretion is lodged in the President as to the enforcement of the law. It was found in the opinion of a majority of the subcommittee, that the President's communication to Attorney General Bonaparte was in effect a direction not to interfere with the merger. It was pointed out that under the federal constitution, the President is the one official who is especially charged to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

the extreme age and infirmity of the parents. Mr. Neff is 81 years old, and his wife is 77 years of age. The father is deaf and decrepit, and the mother has been unable to walk for 15 years. Fearing to break the sad news suddenly, their son H B Neff last night told his mother that William had been hurt, but said nothing about his death. The father had already gone to bed, and was not informed of the tragedy.

May Not Withstand Shock

Thinking that her son who was her youngest child, was only injured the invalid mother broke down completely, and sobbed and moaned all night. Mrs H B Neff her daughter-in-law, secured medicine for the old lady in an ineffectual attempt to soothe her. The mother repeatedly said that she would not be able to stand the shock if her baby boy" did not recover

The parents came to this state in 1864, first settling near Denver, and were once reported as having been killed by the Indians during a raid. They removed further south a few years later, finally settling on what is now known as the Cottonwood ranch about 7 miles northeast of this city about the year 1870. They were living on this ranch, on which the dead man was afterward born, when Colorado Springs was founded in 1871. The couple afterward removed to this city where they have lived ever since

William A. Neff married Miss Maude Shields in Stanbury, Mo, about 1896, returning to Colorado Springs shortly afterward. He was engaged in the grocery business at 312 South Tejon street, next to his father's property for some time, later entering the feed business. He secured a lease on the Gwillim ranch two or three years ago, taking his wife and family there with him.

Foul Breath

Made Pure and Sweet By the Use of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

[illegible]

Do not go among your friends with a breath so odious as to make your presence distasteful. Foul breath is capable of easy removal if you will take a little time to overcome it. Generally foul breath comes from one of two causes, impure gases or foul digestive fluids.

Charcoal is the strongest absorbent of foul gases known. It positively attracts poisons and neutralizes their evil effects

A noted French physician swallowed strychnine enough to kill three men and with a teaspoonful of charcoal removed the bad effects of this terribly swift poison

A little charcoal in a bedroom or cellar will take foul air pure. Pure willow charcoal mixed with honey are the component parts of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges and by ... with ... the ... after ... meals, ... two or three after meals and at bedtime and foul breath flies at once. No matter how you ... this ... will ... your ... Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will stop ... and sweeten the breath

They are perfectly harmless and the eating of a box would cause you no inconvenience whatever.

Charcoal is hard to prepare for the stomach because it must be strong and pure and most people will not take it unless made palatable. Stuart's inimitable process presents charcoal to the taste and system in all the nicety desired.

Choice virgin willow is burnt into dominant's charcoal; this is mixed with pure honey and the combination is compressed under tremendous power into a lozenge of great pleasantness and efficiency

Don't let your bad breath make people cross the street to avoid you, go to the nearest drug store and buy a box of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges today and eat what you will. Two or three after the meal will sweeten your breath at once. If you want proof of this fact send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. HARRIMAN WILL RESUME ACTIVITY IN NORTHWEST

Large Portion of Proceeds of $82,000,000 of 20-Year S. P. Bonds Will Be Used for Purpose.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20—The Tribune tomorrow will say that a large part of the proceeds of the issue of $82,000,000 of 20-year convertible bonds which the directors of the Southern Pacific company on last Friday announced has been authorized, is to be devoted to a resumption of Harriman activity in railroad construction in the far northwest, particularly in Oregon. Several important lines in Oregon had been surveyed and were well under construction in 1907 before the financial panic of that year put a stop to it

James J. Hill has recently pushed several lines, notably the Spokane, Portland and Seattle, into what has formerly been regarded as Harriman territory, and Harriman evidently proposes to extend his rails over the road's already laid out before the other develops into a big hinder. Harriman evidently proposes to forestall any such competition as might result from the action of the Oregon legislature on Friday in passing a constitutional amendment providing for state construction of railroads. Recent rapid strides made by Oregon in irrigation and reclamation projects have stimulated railroad activity there.

COMMITTEE PLACES VACANT IN SENATE

NUMEROUS VACANCIES OF IMPORTANCE TO FILL.

Fight for Reform Promises to Be a Strenuous One—Root Favored. LaFollette Held Down.

By Sheldon S. Cline,

Special to The Gazette

WASHINGTON, Feb 20.— The "insurgents" of the House of Representatives will have to share the limelight with the "insurgents" of the United States Senate. The fight for reform in the upper body promises to be as strenuous as in the lower one. It will begin immediately upon the convening of the extra session next month and continue until the new Congress is fully organized

It has been many years since there have been vacant so many important committee places in the Senate as will have to be filled in organizing that body for the work of the Sixty-first Congress. For instance, there will be three vacancies on the appropriations committee, caused by the death of Senator Allison and the retirement of Senator Hemenway of Indiana (Republican) and Senator Teller of Colorado (Democrat). The chairmanship of the committee, which was held by Senator Allison, will fall to Senator Hale of Maine. Among aspirants for the two Republican vacancies are Senators Wetmore of Rhode Island, Kean of New Jersey, Dolliver of Iowa and Nelson of Minnesota. Democratic possibilities for Mr. Teller's place are Simmons of North Carolina and McLaurin of Mississippi. There is no chance of any of the young "insurgents" getting on the appropriations committee, the most they can hope for being to get some of the desirable places to be vacated by the older senators who will be promoted.

Important Vacancies.

The most important committee of the next Congress in the Senate will be that of finance, which will handle the tariff bill for the upper house. Here also there are vacancies, made by death and retirement. Mr. Allison was a member of this committee and retiring members are Hansborough of North Dakota and Platt of New York, Republicans, and Teller of Colorado, Democrat. Senator Hopkins of Illinois also is a member of this committee and should he fail of re-election there will be a fifth vacancy. Republican senators regarded as possibilities are Lodge of Massachusetts, Carter of Montana, Nelson of Minnesota, McCumber of North Dakota, Clapp, of Minnesota and Beveridge, of Indiana. The only Democrat prominently mentioned for Teller's place is Clay of Georgia. A ... talk of Root of New York for Platt's place, and he probably could have the appointment should it be in line with his desires. It is considered certain that Mr. Root, having served both as secretary of war and secretary of state, will have places on the military affairs and foreign relations committees.

Will Be Fight on Root.

Around Mr. Root's assignment to important committees is going to hinge a good deal of the fight the "insurgents" are planning to make. While no one is disposed to deny Mr. Root's title to desirable committee places, in view of his distinguished service in the cabinet and universally recognized ability there are other new senators who cannot see why their services before coming to the Senate should not also be recognized. For instance, LaFollette of Wisconsin and Cummins of Iowa both had been governors of their states and had national reputation before becoming senators. It is insistent, declare their friends, that distinguished service in the federal government should be recognized and distinguished service in the states ignored

Senator Cummins is yet in ignorance as to what his committee assignments will eventually be, but unless the revolt against the Senate organization succeeds he cannot expect to secure any important committee places. Senator LaFollette is chairman of the select committee on investigation on the Potomac river front at Washington, which makes him about as influential in legislation as the colored messenger who sits at his committee room door. He also holds membership on the committees on the census, civil service and retrenchment, immigration, Indian affairs and pensions, not one of which is regarded as an important committee.

LaFollette Victim of Prejudice.

That LaFollette has been the victim of prejudices and injustice in committee assignments cannot be denied. Take the case of Hemenway of Indiana, who was elected senator the same month of the same year LaFollette was elected and who took his seat only a few months earlier. Hemenway is a member of appropriations and military affairs, two of the most important committees of the Senate, his other committee places being on the University of the United States, etc which makes him about as influential depredations and railroads. Crane of Massachusetts, who became a senator only a year ahead of LaFollette, is a member of two important committees, interstate commerce and postoffices and post roads, besides being chairman of the committee on Canadian relations, and member of the committees of commerce, industrial expositions and to examine the several branches of the civil service. Commerce which is here ranked among Crane's minor assignments, is more important than any committee of which LaFollette is a member, with the possible exception of pensions.

The explanation lies in the fact that Hemenway and Crane are persona grata with the ruling Senate powers, while LaFollette is not. The latter had the bad judgment, if not the bad taste, to criticise his Senate colleagues in platform speeches, and he is being punished for it. Herein lies the debatable point of the whole matter. Have the "elder statesmen" a right to allow their personal likes and dislikes to control in so important a matter as the organization of the United States Senate?

GRAND VALLEY DITCH IS APPROVED BY GARFIELD

Big Irrigation Project Will Be Begun at Once, Now That Official Sanction Is Given.

WASHINGTON, Feb 20.—Secretary Garfield today formally approved a contract with the Grand Valley Water Users Association of Grand Junction, Colo, authorizing the reclamation service to construct an irrigation system officially known as the Grand River project

Actual construction will probably begin immediately. The project is located in an immensely valuable orchard valley, where some peach orchards have sold for $4,800 an acre

Approximately 50,000 acres are embraced in the project, of which 25,000 acres are public lands and the cost of reclamation is estimated at $3,500,000. The plans provide for a dam across the Grand river 80 feet high and 600 feet long, a tunnel 7,000 feet in length and 50 miles of main canal. Owing to the magnitude of the engineering works, the construction period will be several years. The signing of the contract makes it possible to begin legal proceedings to acquire necessary rights of way through a number of orchard tracts. Suits for condemnation will be initiated at an early date.

TO RENEW PROTEST BEFORE LEGISLATURE

STRONG ARGUMENTS AGAINST GAMMON'S SCHEMES.

Lawyers Are Going to Denver Prepared to Put Up Hard Fight Tomorrow.

Citizens of El Paso county, through Attorneys L. W. Cunningham, R. L. Chambers and O. E. Collins, will tomorrow renew their protest before the committee on counties and county lines at the legislature, against the partition of this county to form sections of the proposed new counties of Holt and Boone. The bills providing for the creation of the new counties will probably be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the house calendar this week. They will meet with determined opposition. Lem Gammon, representative from El Paso county, who originated the scheme, is chairman of the committee on counties and county lines. W. C. Daly, also representative of this city, has made no statement of his attitude toward the proposition. He has shown every courtesy and consideration possible to those interested in getting at the facts, without manifesting bias or prejudice on either side of the controversy.

Strong Arguments.

Obvious reasons why the bills providing for the creation of the new counties of Holt, Boone and Bryan should be defeated are to be presented to the committee by showing that:

Should Holt county be created it would absorb such a large portion of the taxable property of Elbert county, now heavily in debt, that bankruptcy would result.

Should Boone county be created it would embarrass the financial condition of Douglas county, deprive Elbert county of a large portion of its territory, seriously affect a large section of El Paso county near Colorado Springs, and would drive the remaining portion of Elbert county into bankruptcy, besides creating a weak county.

If Bryan county is created, Elbert county will be seriously injured by depriving it of a large portion of its already too scant territory, and bankruptcy would ensue for both counties.

If any two of the proposed counties are created, the remaining portion of Elbert county can not maintain a county government and would become bankrupt.

If all three proposed counties are created, then Elbert county would be obliterated and three new and weak counties would take the place of Elbert county, in addition to portions taken from the counties of Adams, Arapahoe, Douglas and El Paso.

The general agricultural and grazing conditions are alike in the territory embraced in the three proposed new counties.

Are Disgruntled.

A careful investigation of the most ardent supporters of these bills reveals the fact that the most energetic of them are disappointed office-seekers.

A number of the leading supporters of the bills have stated that they are unable to get office, although they have frequently been candidates, and they ascribe the cause of defeat to their geographical location in the counties as they now exist, and for that reason they want the new counties created.

There is one exception, however, regarding the Holt county bill, to-wit, the introducer and principal supporter of the bill, who is substantially the owner of the proposed county seat townsite of Ramah, and the principal store, bank and taxable property therein, together with a large amount of land immediately adjacent to the townsite.

Homesteaders Leaving.

Statistics will be presented showing that the population in the territory embraced in the proposed new county of Holt has been greatly reduced by homesteaders leaving the country because of crop failures. The population in the affected district is estimated at 1,500. The estimated total assessed valuation is $1,250,000, distributed as follows: Fifty-one miles of railroad at $12,500 a mile, $637,500; other railroad lands, $42,000; deeded lands outside of railroad lands, $100,000; improvements and all other personal property, $470,500.

Computing from a levy of 6 mills, the levy in El Paso county, the revenue derived would be $7,800, but a levy of 25 mills would leave a deficit of $13,750 the first year, after organization of the new county.

The cost of organizing and maintaining Holt county for the first year is estimated as follows: Transcribing county records, $20,000; complete new records, legal blanks, etc., $10,000; safety vaults, fixtures, office rents, jail, $6,000; legal expense of organization, $3,000; officer's salaries, $6,000, making a total of $45,000. The 25-mill levy would produce $31,250, leaving the deficit of $13,750. To this deficit would be added a share of the $16,000 indebtedness of Elbert county.

Physical Conditions.

Pointing to physical conditions in the proposed Holt county territory, counsel for El Paso citizens will show that the new county would find its resources in stock-raising and agriculture. The Rock Island railroad is now supplying the needy farmers with seed. Many carloads of grain and hay are being shipped into the district to feed the stock. The district has no incorporated towns, graded schools, high schools or newspapers.

Information was received yesterday from a member of the committee on counties and county lines to the effect that the new Boone county bill, as now drafted, proposes to take from El Paso county a strip two townships wide, north and south, and four townships long, east and west, joining the proposed county of Holt on the western line of that county. This would take from El Paso county a strip of land 12 by 24 miles, the western line running just west of Table Rock and the southern line running about a mile and a half north of Falcon.

Table Rock, Eastonville, Peyton, Bijou Basin and Calhan would all lie within the territory to be disannexed from El Paso county and included in the new county of Boone.

It is proposed to run the western lines north so as to take from the county of Douglas a strip three miles east and west by 18 miles north and south, and then continue northward through Arapahoe and Adams or a part of Adams county.

YOUNG COOPER TELL STORY OF SHOOTING OF CARMACK

papa, that Carmack was in a vicious mood. He said he also told Craig to tell Carmack that unless he ceased using his name the town was not big enough to hold them both.

"I was greatly worried and said I believed my uncle could bring influences to bear to show Carmack the injustice of his course. It was then that papa said: 'He had no right to use my name and I have a right to protect myself.'

"Papa said he believed Mr. Bradford could help in the case and would see him later in the day. In the meantime he said: 'If I could have an interview with Mr. Carmack, I believe I could settle ——.'"

The entire counsel was on their feet and a sharp argument followed as to how far explanatory remarks could go. The court held, that anything in explanation was admissible, but that the remark as to Cooper's proposed interview with Carmack was incompetent.

"After this conversation, what became of your father?"

"He left the office and said he would be back later in the day."

"What did you do then?"

"I telephoned my sister, Mrs. Burch."

"How old is your father?"

"He is 67 years of age."

"And his physical condition?"

Right Hand Crippled.

"His right hand is crippled, the two smaller fingers of the hand are bent in and cannot be moved."

This line of questioning indicated that the defense will not put Colonel Cooper on the stand.

"What did you do then?"

"I went out and looked for papa, but failed to find him. I returned to my office and telegraphed Governor Patterson if he knew about the trouble. I then went to the Tulane hotel."

"Why did you go to the Tulane?"

"Because Democratic headquarters are there and papa frequented them. It was on this occasion that I was seen in the Tulane window across from Carmack's office."

"Did you get a pistol that day?"

"I did. My purpose in getting it was this: The language father sent to Carmack was very strong and, knowing Carmack as I did, I feared he would act of it. Later I found father at the Maxwell hotel. He said he was to see Bradford at 2 p. m., and that Bradford would try to adjust the trouble with Carmack."

"Was Colonel Cooper back at your office about noon?"

"No sir; not while I was there."

"You did not hear him use the violent language Miss Lee says she heard?"

"No, sir."

"Had you received any information from Mr. Bradford as to the movements of your father?"

"Mr. Bradford told me not to worry, that it could be fixed up. Father came back at 3 p. m., followed shortly by Adjt. Gen. Tully Brown. Then I went into the office with them."

"How long did you stay there?"

"Until father and I left."

The witness detailed the walk from Bradford's office to the scene of the shooting. They walked up toward the Arcade.

"At the middle of the alley intercepting the Arcade, we met John D. Sharpe and Representative Mathews. We stopped and talked a while. Mathews left and we turned in on Union in the direction of the governor's mansion."

"Were you expecting to meet Sharpe that day?"

"We were not. When we got to Vine street or Seventh avenue, I saw Mr. Carmack a block away. I turned to Mr. Sharpe and said: 'There comes Senator Carmack; don't let papa see him.'

"I whispered it and then to papa I said: 'Let's hurry up papa.'"

"Did you say to your father, 'Let's go up here' and did he reply 'No, let's stay here a while?'"

"No, sir. When papa came up to me I got him by the arm and hurried him north towards the governor's mansion. I began to hurry him, and he pulled away, saying: 'What's the matter with you.' Then he turned and exclaimed, 'Say, is that Senator Carmack? Yes, I'll go over and talk to him now.'"

"I said, 'oh, no, papa, you must not.' He said, 'I know Carmack; he knows me; there will be no trouble.' I let him go about 30 feet. I did not know what to do. Then I went over to him."

"Why did you think you should go over with him?"

"I remembered the note papa had sent, and feared for him."

"What did you think was your father's purpose in going over there?"

Senator Drew Gun.

"I believed it was to talk to the senator about these publications. Senator Carmack was about to pass Mrs. Eastman and was putting his hat back on his head. Papa spoke to him as he was passing her, not expecting to speak. Papa said 'Senator Carmack,' and instantly the senator drew his revolver. It came out instantly just like —" (The witness illustrated the motion.)

"It paralyzed me for a minute and I sprang toward papa as Carmack began to back toward the pole. As I jumped, a shot exploded in my face. The bullet struck my necktie and went into my shoulder. I went after my gun which was in my overcoat pocket. The second shot went through my sleeve and entered the post. I slipped around the post and found Carmack aiming at me again."

"What did you do then?"

"I began firing. I fired three times, as fast as I could. I saw Carmack reel and fall, and quit firing."

"Why did you stop shooting?"

"Because I saw that he was hit."

"Did your father say anything about a coward?"

Called Senator a Coward.

"Yes, sir; as Carmack drew his revolver and got behind Mrs. Eastman, he said something about a coward hiding behind a woman's skirts."

"Did you see a pistol in your father's hands up to the time Carmack began to shoot?"

"No, sir."

"Did any one fire a shot before Senator Carmack?"

"No, sir; Carmack fired two shots first, and I fired three. That was all that were fired."

"Is the bullet still in your body?"

"I do not think so. The day after the shooting I found a bullet in my bed at St. Thomas hospital where I was taken."

The witness produced the bullet which he said he felt at first in bed about his knees.

"At the time you shot Senator Carmack, did you not believe that your life was in danger?"

"I believed that if I had not done so he would have killed me. I think in another instant he would have shot me again."

The witness denied ever having said to Charles H. Warwick that Carmack "ought to be dead and in hell 20 years ago."

"How long did you know the senator?"

"For many years. I never had aught but friendly feeling for the senator."

Attorney General McCarn said that as cross-examination would take several hours he would ask for an adjournment until Monday. The court granted the request.

The Man Who Eats Well

And Enjoys Food Lives Life as He Should and Gets the Most from It.

The man who eats is the man who works, and the man who works is the man who wins. Tireless workers depend upon a storehouse of vim and vigor. India is noted for its fasters and its dreamers. Europe and America for their eaters and their workers.

In America we have been doing nothing but work this past quarter of a century. That is why our old men say, "In my days no one had dyspepsia." Of course, all men in those days ate and worked, now they work and eat.

If eating interferes with business, men give up eating. This is good logic for the dollar-getter, but poor wisdom for the man who really wants to live.

Abuse of anything God given results in punishment, and man is a pigmy when it comes to cheating his system.

If you take from the system that which is intended should remain, or put into it that which is intended should be kept out, you are cheating yourself, and sooner or later pay the penalty.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are concentrated vegetable and fruit essences which give the system every fluid, stimulant and ingredient necessary to gain the fullest strength from everything which goes into the stomach, or to keep from the system everything which should not lay and decay in it.

If you will eat fast and improperly, if you will drink and eat irregularly and to excess, then give to Nature as you do so enough of the essences she demands to neutralize the bad effects of your habits.

After a meal take a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet, and the meal won't hurt you or your stomach.

At a midnight dinner take a Stuart tablet and you will sleep well and get up without a breath which is filled with the decay of the midnight meal.

Fortify your stomach like you do your business. Fortunes when lost can be regained, but the stomach outraged stays with you to the finish, and you know it is there.

If you want to know what these tablets will do, buy a package from any druggist, price 50 cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package free by mail. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

AEROPLANE IS NOT SO DANGEROUS AS AUTO

SO DECLARES KING ALFONSO, WATCHING EXPERIMENT.

Wright Brothers Give Exhibition Before Ruler of Spain, who Later Dines Them.

PAU, France, Feb. 20.—King Alfonso of Spain, today witnessed two successful aeroplane flights by the Wright brothers, after which he entertained Wilbur and Orville Wright, Hart O. Berg, their European business manager, and the mayor of Pau at luncheon.

It had been generally supposed his majesty would take advantage of this opportunity to be the first sovereign to make a trip in an aeroplane, but the king had promised Queen Victoria not to go aloft, and he kept his pledge. An immense crowd had gathered in the field when his majesty arrived.

The weather was ideal and Wilbur Wright made a splendid flight of 27 minutes. He circled in a figure 8 within a short radius, then flew high in the air, only to come down and skim over the ground. Finally the machine took the direction of the race course and was lost sight of. Fourteen minutes later it reappeared coming from the opposite direction. During the flight, the king remarked he did not think aeroplane flying as dangerous as automobiling.

When the machine had come to earth, King Alfonso congratulated Mr. Wright heartily, and upon the invitation of the American he occupied the passenger's seat while the proud inventor explained his machine in detail. The king then suggested a flight with a passenger, and Wilbur Wright took up Count DeLambert for 12 minutes, leaving the entire direction of the machine to the passenger.

His majesty predicted a great future for the aeroplane.

CHINESE COULDN'T GROW FAT; TRIES SUICIDE

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—Of the many and strange reasons assigned for suicides for ending their lives, it remained for a Chinese of this city to give the most unique cause for wishing to bring to a close his earthly existence. Jue Sue Dock is in a local hospital, having attempted to cut his throat because he could not get fat. Dock is an extremely lean specimen of the Chinese race, and his greatest ambition has been to get fat. He tried everything known to Chinese science to gain avoirdupois, but the more he tried the thinner he became, until finally, in despair, he almost severed his throat with a knife. He missed the jugular vein and may recover.

Three Months' Treatment FREE

(MEDICINES EXCEPTED)

WILL BE GIVEN BY The New York Doctors

Beginning Monday morning at nine o'clock and continuing for one week, the New York Doctors announce that they will examine all patients free of charge and contract to treat them for three months also free except for a small charge for medicines.

This is in accordance with their usual mid-winter policy and is for the purpose of adding as many cured patients to their list as possible. Three months is the usual time required to cure the average curable chronic disease, and after an experience of nearly six years in the treatment of chronic diseases in Colorado Springs, they have found that the cures they can make in the winter months will keep them busy with patients recommended by their cures for the balance of the year.

There is no string attached to this offer. All you have to do is to call at the offices of the New York Doctors any day this week and be examined, which will cost you nothing. After your examination, your case will be explained to you. You will be told whether you can be cured or not, or if there is a doubt, you will be given an opinion. Your name will not be published in the paper, nor will you be asked to sign a testimonial. We know that if we can cure you that you will be grateful enough to tell your friends. We have done this for nearly six years and are seldom disappointed in cured cases bringing us new patients.

OLD BUILDING TO BE REPLACED BY NEW ONE

The old building which for years has been the home of Dickens' "Curiosity Shop" at 27 North Tejon street, is to be torn down by the owner, W. H. Roby, and replaced by a one-story brick building. Work will be started about March 1 and the new structure will be finished by July 1, to be used as a store building.

The old frame building is one of the oldest in the business district of the city.

"THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE"

Florence Roberts Does Clever Work in New Play—Good Supporting Company.

The coming of Miss Florence Roberts is always an event of more than ordinary importance in the theatrical season. Miss Roberts is undoubtedly one of the most talented actresses on the stage today, and her work throughout her entire performance reaches a high artistic level.

For many years Miss Roberts has been playing in the west, where she is appreciated and valued at her true worth. The east has not yet come to know her. New York, on her two appearances in that city, acclaimed her an actress of extraordinary powers, but, owing to the fact that each time she went in that city she was hampered by inadequate plays, she was unable to create the stir that she otherwise would have made.

Offers Few Opportunities.

Miss Roberts made her annual appearance in Colorado Springs last night in a new play by Seymour Obermer on the English divorce law, "The House of Bondage," which offers her but little opportunity, although she makes the most of those presented. Her entire performance is sustained, and she never lets it drop. She gives a picture of a real, live woman, not a theatrical, impossible creature. She never rants, nor tears up the carpet to express her intense feelings, but she goes about as any woman in real life does. She never strives for effect, and consequently she is all the more effective.

Miss Roberts has surrounded herself with one of the best organizations on the road. Arthur Forrest last seen in this part of the country as leading man for Mrs. Fiske, played the role of the husband almost perfectly. Thurlow Bergen as the lover presented a finished, strong performance, and the women, including Ann Warrington and Mary Bertrand, were excellent.

The setting of the play was handsome and complete. The sunset on the Swiss Alps, shown in the last act, was beautiful and effectively done.

FUEL AT HALF PRICE

Fuel for the household is a burning question and is almost always open for discussion. Every known inflammable material has been used by succeeding generations ever since prehistoric ages. The one idea being to find a fuel that would yield the greatest amount of heat for the least money and yet be clean and convenient to handle.

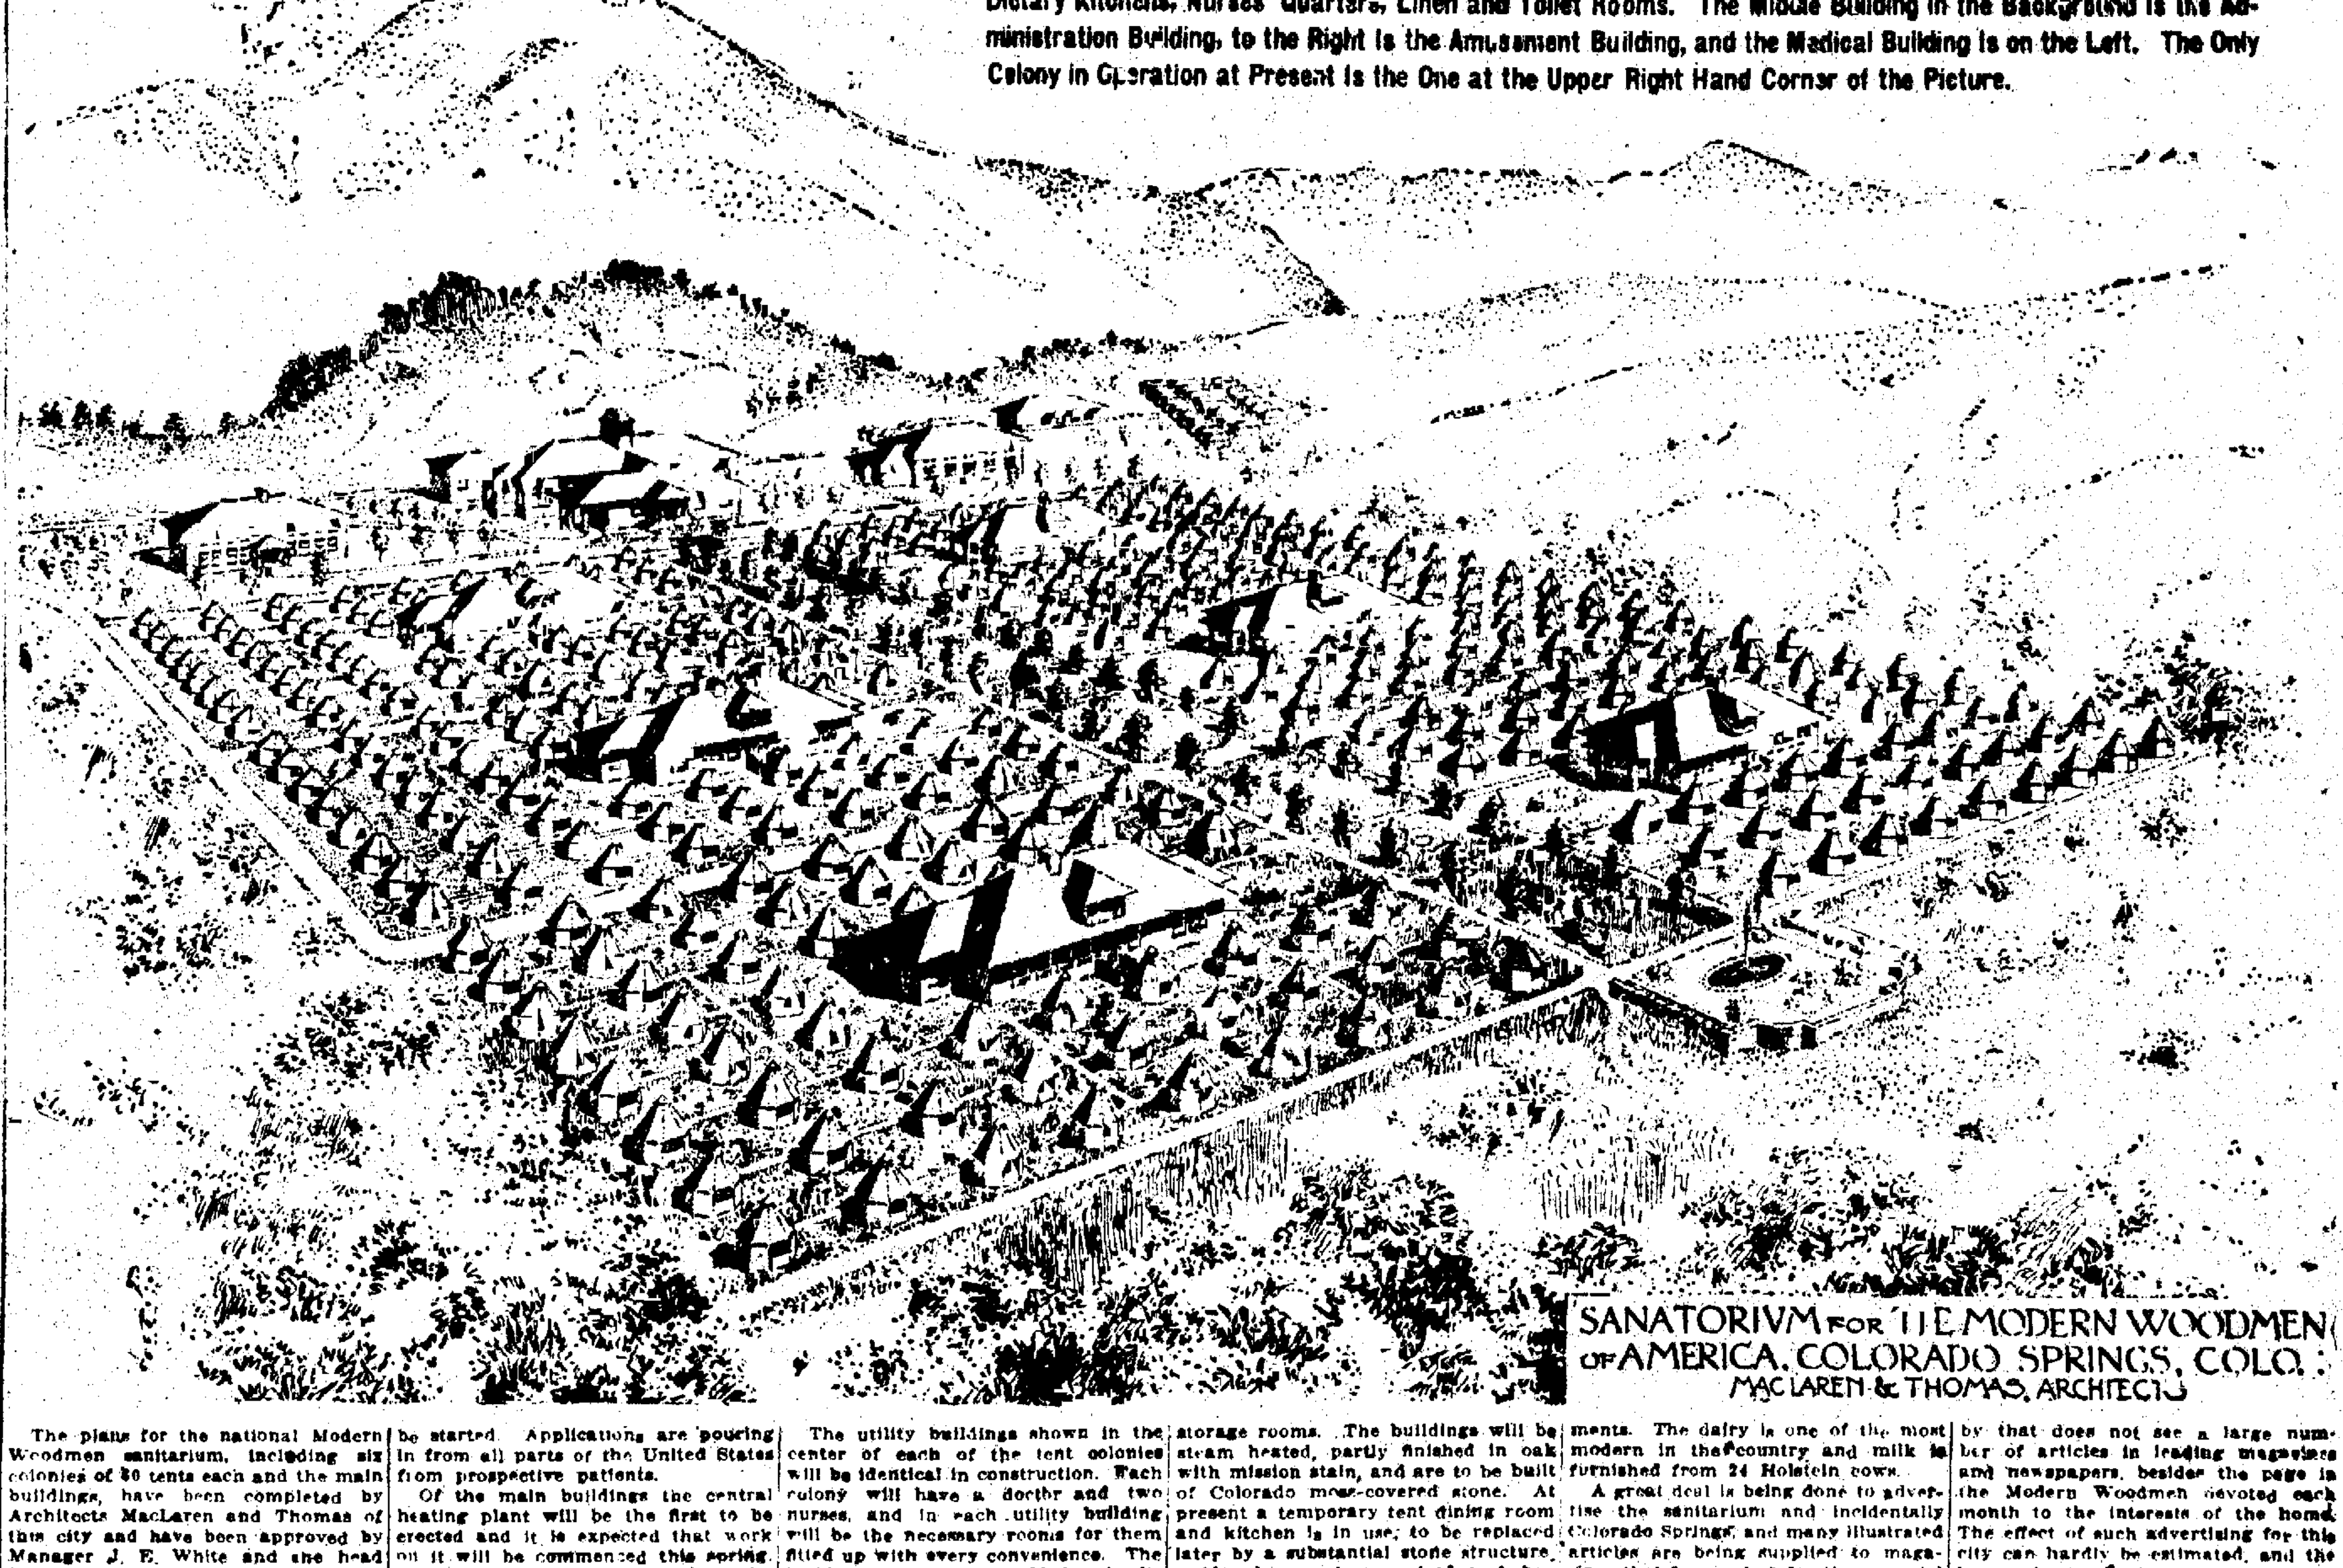

We have it today. You can cook with gas or run your furnace with coke for about one half the expense of coal. Both are clean and convenient to handle.

They require little attention and give maximum results with minimum expense.

General View of Woodmen Sanitarium, North of Colorado Springs, as It Will Appear When Completed With Six Tent Colonies. In the Middle of Each Colony Is the Utility Building With the Doctor's Offices, Lunch Rooms, Dietary Kitchens, Nurses' Quarters, Linen and Toilet Rooms. The Middle Building in the Background Is the Administration Building, to the Right Is the Amusement Building, and the Medical Building Is on the Left. The Only Colony in Operation at Present Is the One at the Upper Right Hand Corner of the Picture.

The plans for the national Modern Woodmen sanitarium, including six colonies of 80 tents each and the main buildings, have been completed by Architects MacLaren and Thomas of this city and have been approved by Manager J. E. White and the head officers of the M. W. A. At present only one colony has been completed, but Dr. White announces that another colony to cost about $30,000 will be commenced at once, and as fast as funds are available other colonies will be started. Applications are pouring in from all parts of the United States from prospective patients.

Of the main buildings the central heating plant will be the first to be erected and it is expected that work on it will be commenced this spring. The main administration building, the medical building, and the dining hall and amusement hall, will not be erected for some time as it is ... to get the colony in good working condition before these are built.

The utility buildings shown in the center of each of the tent colonies will be identical in construction. Each colony will have a doctor and two nurses, and in each utility building will be the necessary rooms for them fitted up with every convenience. The buildings will be 72 by 29 feet in dimensions and will contain a lunch room for patients who require light refreshments between meals, a dietary kitchen, toilets and bath rooms for the doctor and nurses, linen ... and storage rooms. The buildings will be steam heated, partly finished in oak with mission stain, and are to be built of Colorado moss-covered stone. At present a temporary tent dining room and kitchen is in use, to be replaced later by a substantial stone structure.

Already a vast amount of work has been done in getting the sanitarium under way, and about $100,000 has been spent on boulevards, waterworks, reservoirs, tents, temporary buildings, dairy and other improvements. The dairy is one of the most modern in the country and milk is furnished from 24 Holstein cows.

A great deal is being done to advertise the sanitarium and incidentally Colorado Springs, and many illustrated articles are being supplied to magazines that have asked for the material as a matter of general interest. Thousands of booklets are being prepared for distribution among the 20,000 physicians of the order and the million members. Scarcely a week goes by that does not see a large number of articles in leading magazines and newspapers, besides the page in the Modern Woodmen devoted each month to the interests of the home. The effect of such advertising for this city can hardly be estimated, and the larger the institution grows the more widely will the city be advertised.

The average girl could lead an average man around even if he were carrying her in his arms.

MAY HAVE TWO HUSBANDS

The Woodward Divorce Case Is Reopened by County Judge J. E. Little

As a result of a decision by County Judge J E. Little yesterday, reopening the Woodward divorce case the former Mrs Woodward may be placed in the embarrassing position of having two husbands

Anna Woodward secured a divorce from Howard Woodward in the county court in this city, January 27, 1908, but the husband recently applied for a reopening of the case on the ground that he was not properly summoned for the hearing of the suit. His former wife, meantime, married again in Kansas Her whereabouts has not been made known to the court, but she is supposed to be in Nebraska.

Under the laws of this state, Mrs. Woodward was not allowed to marry again within one year of the issuance of the divorce decree, but the fact that she did marry within that time, even though in another state, may cause her considerable embarrassment if she comes within the jurisdiction of the local county court.

Mr. Clint G. Ford who has been identified with the very foremost dramatic attractions, including Gillet's "Secret Service Co.," "David Harum," "The Clansman," etc., has this to say of Newbro's Herpicide:

"For years I was annoyed with dandruff and itching of the scalp, all due to my twenty years of theatrical life with its incumbent 'make-up' and wig wearing. At times the itching of the scalp was intense. All remedies failed me until I tried Herpicide, and I soon found that it was giving wonderful results. The itching and also the dandruff entirely ceased and my hair resumed its natural life and vigor.

"There is no question in my mind about the reality of the dandruff germ, and I unhesitatingly recommend Herpicide to my friends in the profession."

(Signed) "CLINT G. FORD."

THEATRICAL FOLK
Use and Recommend
NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Extravagant claims for toilet remedies do not influence theatrical people, because long experience enables them to discriminate intelligently. They demand merit and will rarely use a preparation that is not actually worth as much or more than it costs in dollars and cents.

Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and by actual test does more good than all other hair remedies combined. This accounts for its popularity in theatrical circles.

"Queen Roselle" writes of Newbro's Herpicide

"I take pleasure in announcing the very satisfactory results I have had from the use of Newbro's Herpicide. My hair was falling out so rapidly that I was afraid I would lose it all. A friend advised Herpicide, and after using it faithfully my hair stopped falling out, the dandruff disappeared and my hair is now very soft and glossy.

"I would like to see every lady of the profession try Herpicide, for I am confident that they would be delighted with it."

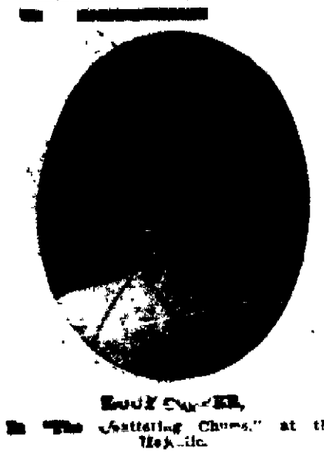

(Signed) "QUEEN ROSELLE."

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Dept. 7, Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet.

Colorado City News

WILL BEGIN PLATTING CEMETERY ADDITION

City Engineer W. P. Woodside will begin work tomorrow on the platting of the new addition to the cemetery, Mayor I. A. Foote made a statement to this effect yesterday. The lots will be laid out to conform with Sixth street, rather than in accordance with the original cemetery, which would cause them to lie at an angle to the streets by which the property is bounded.

NO FURTHER MOVE IN ANTISALOON CAMPAIGN

No further move has been made in the antisaloon campaign. Both of the petitions which were filed last Tuesday, one asking for a vote at the coming municipal election on the question of whether or not Colorado City shall become antisaloon territory" and the other that the question be" shall the second ward become antisaloon territory?" are in the possession of City Clerk C. R. Ammerman, who stated yesterday that he had done nothing further in the matter. It is probable that both questions will be placed on the ballot, in which event the liquor men, in order to win, would not only have to carry the second ward, but the entire city as well.

This is to certify, that my daughter was down for almost one year with a cold. The doctors finally pronounced it consumption. We had given up hope for her recovery. I was given a sample bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. I gave it all to her in about three weeks. It stopped the cough, and gave her rest. I sent next day and bought a 50c bottle and began giving it. In three month's time she was well. There can not be too much said in favor of Foley's Honey and Tar. It saved my child's life. Mrs. Caspar Bittner, Fayette City, Pa.

INTERESTING APPARATUS RECEIVED BY COLLEGE

The department of psychology at Colorado College has just received from the manufacturers an interesting piece of apparatus designed to illustrate certain points in the visual perception of space. The perception of space seems ordinarily to be simply a matter of opening one's eyes, and looking. The looking, however, is not altogether a simple matter. Light and shade, dullness of color tone with distant objects, difference in apparent size of known objects as they are near or far, strain in the muscles of the eye as nearer objects are looked at. The difference of the right eye view of the same object, if near by, and the hiding of part of a more distant object by a nearer one, play a part in determining how far and how large objects seem. The apparatus in question has to do mainly with the difference between the right and left eye views of an object, and enables one to vary the usual conditions of difference. The large mirrors, three feet apart, reflect the light from in front to two small mirrors placed close before the eyes, and which reflect the light into the eyes. This gives the same effect as if the eyes were three feet apart. The right eye view is very different from the left one, and consequently the object looked at appears much elongated, and two objects but six inches apart look as if they were separated by six feet. The ordinary stereoscope view is taken by two cameras with the lenses a trifle farther apart than the distance between the eyes. This slight increase in distance gives to the ordinary stereoscopic picture a greater depth effect than would be gained by looking at the actual scene directly.

At the college is a stereoscopic picture of the moon, one view being taken from Chicago, the other from New York. This gives the effect of a solid sphere instead of the flat disc we actually see. Text [illegible] of the college students took two views of Pikes Peak and Cameron's Cone, the views being taken three blocks apart. When combined in a stereoscope, they brought out the distance in depth between the Cone and the Peak in a startling way. The [illegible] [illegible] actually looking at the objects [illegible] and as the [illegible] give, and in this form it is known as a telestereoscope.

If, in place of the large mirrors at the side, stereoscopic views are placed, one on each side, the apparatus becomes the Wheatstone stereoscope, and the depth effect is gained in looking at the pictures. If the apparatus is arranged so that the right eye looks directly at an object in front, and a view of the same object is reflected at the same time into the left eye, but from a mirror considerably to the right of the right eye, then the object appears hollow. If two objects placed one behind the other are looked at, the farther one will appear the nearer. In this case the view for the right and left eyes are practically interchanged, and the result is a reversal of perspective. This form of the apparatus is known as a pseudoscope from the false impression it gives.

The apparatus was constructed especially for the psychological laboratory of the college, and is novel in combining into one form the stereoscope, telestereoscope and pseudoscope.

WILL NOT BUILD LOOP THIS SEASON, SAYS LLOYD

Owing to the large amount of new work planned by the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway company for the coming summer, the proposed loop to connect the Broadmoor and Canon lines will not be built this season, according to a statement made yesterday by William A. Lloyd, secretary of the company. A connection between the two lines had been planned to facilitate the handling of large crowds during the tourist season.

According to Mr. Lloyd, the new lines to the Printers Home and to the Town and Gown club golf grounds are of prime importance, and if the franchises are secured they will be built at once.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 31 one cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages cloth bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

What's Doing In the World of Sports

MAKING STRONG BID FOR GLIDDEN TOUR

COLORADO SPRINGS LIKELY TO BE INCLUDED.

W. Has Big Advantage to Pikes Peak Region to Have Route Through This City

If an eastern itinerary is decided upon for the Glidden auto tour next July, Colorado Springs will be included and the Pikes Peak region will become the Mecca for autoists from all parts of the country. The assurance that Colorado Springs will be included in the tour of this, the biggest event of its kind in auto circles, comes as a result of an active campaign inaugurated by the Chamber of Commerce last October.

Various sections of the country are at the present time urging upon the contest board of the American Automobile association, their respective claims, but the proposal that the route cover the great Transmississippi territory between Chicago and Denver has met with favor in many quarters and it seems probable that a route in this part of the country will be selected. It has been determined definitely that the tour is to be held in the west but the selection of the route is still in abeyance. The one route tentatively suggested, which is meeting with much favor is from Chicago to Denver by way of Omaha and return by way of Kansas City, St Louis and Louisville. The northwest also wants the tour while several middle western sections are active in presenting their claims.

Will Include Springs.

Colorado is making a strong bid and it is probable that the Chicago-Denver route will finally be chosen. In this case, Colorado Springs will certainly be one of the points visited as the Colorado motorists and civic organizations are lined up in favor of the Arkansas valley-Pueblo-Colorado Springs-Denver route. Officers of the Colorado Motor club just organized as a branch of the American Automobile association, have expressed themselves in favor of this route.

When is was first learned last fall that the Chicago-Denver route was contemplated Secretary A. W. Henderson of the Chamber of Commerce took steps to secure if possible the routing via Colorado Springs, inaugurating an active campaign for that purpose. The question was brought to the attention of the various local organizations and R. W. Chisholm in behalf of the El Paso County Good Roads association, took the lead in presenting the claims of this city. He began correspondence with Frank B. Hower of Buffalo chairman of the contest board who is a personal friend of Mr Chisholm. The Colorado Springs Automobile club gave its support and these three organizations presented letters showing in detail the advantages in routing the tour up the Arkansas valley, and along the base of the mountains through Pueblo and Colorado Springs to Denver.

Good Roads Assured

Mayor D. N. Heizer in behalf of the city and the board of county commissioners for El Paso county sent to Mr. Hower invitations to include this city in the tour the commissioners assuring the contest board that the roads in El Paso county would be in the best possible shape at the time proposed for the tour.

The matter was then taken up with the Pueblo people through E. W. Palmer, secretary of the Pueblo Business Men's association, and the autoists of that city prepared maps and gathered data as to the Arkansas valley route which was forwarded to Mr. Hower, along with letters from various drivers who had made the trip. Now the Denver autoists through the Colorado Motor club, have given their support to this route, practically assuring that if the Glidden tour comes west it will include Colorado Springs. At the next meeting of the joint good roads committee it is probable that further action will be taken.

Is Endurance Contest

The Glidden tour is not a race but an endurance contest, in which the route is mapped out in detail certain sections being set off as the requirement for each day certain cities being designated as stopping places. The car finishing with a perfect, or with the highest score wins the handsome Glidden trophy which was presented several years ago by Charles J. Glidden the famous autoist who has toured practically every country on the globe by auto. It is the big thing in motordom and will do more to attract the attention of the country's auto enthusiasts to the possibilities of motoring in Colorado both as regards scenic and climatic advantages and the condition of the roads than any other event which could be arranged. The tour had its inception in 1904, when the American Automobile association just organized held its first run starting from New York and finishing at St. Louis. The 1905 tour had its start and finish in New York, the itinerary including Hartford, Bretton Woods, Concord and Worcester. It was for this run that Mr Glidden offered his trophy.

In 1906 the tour started at Buffalo, ran through the principal cities in central New York north along the shores of Lake Champlain across the border line into Canada, east from Montreal to Quebec south into Maine, finishing at Bretton Woods. The 1907 tour starting at Cleveland, ran west to Chicago, thence east across the states of Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland to Baltimore where it terminated, having covered 1,750 miles. The 1908 tour was from Buffalo to Saratoga N. Y., by way of Harrisburg Pa., Philadelphia, Albany, Boston and Bethlehem, N. H. The distance was 1,689 miles and the running time 42 days, an average of 139 miles a day. Several teams tied for the Glidden trophy.

Should the Chicago-Denver road be selected this will be the longest and hardest tour in the history of the event. For several months, scouts have been touring through this section of the country investigating roads and securing data to present to the contest board upon which it will decide the exact itinerary announcement in regard to which is expected within the next month or two.

LUNT DECLINES TO BE CAPTAIN OF CREW

SPRINGS MAN TOO BUSY TO ACCEPT HONOR.

Is Highest Position in Harvard Athletics—Elliott C. Cutler of Brookline Elected.

Special to The Gazette.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 20.—In passing up the captaincy of the Harvard varsity crew, Lawrence K. Lunt of Colorado Springs has just declined one of the highest athletic honors that can come to a man at Harvard. When W. F. Severance, who was elected captain immediately after the race at New London last June, in which Harvard was an easy winner, resigned this week on account of illness, an effort was made to induce Lunt, who has done such good work in the crew for the last two years to take the leadership. Lunt, who is one of the most popular men in college, declined absolutely to accept the honor, saying that he already had so many outside college interests to look after that he did not feel he had the extra time necessary to give to the position. It was the first time in many years that a westerner has ever had an opportunity to captain a Harvard crew.

Instead of accepting the position himself Lunt nominated Jesse E. Waid, a former Denver boy, for the place. But Waid is a member of the junior class and while it is practically certain that he will be the captain in 1910, there is an unwritten law at Harvard that juniors shall not be athletic captains so long as there are seniors who are eligible and fitted for the position. Consequently Waid was defeated and Elliott C. Cutler of Brookline, whose brother was quarterback of the varsity football team last fall, and who has another brother who captained the [illegible] crew last June was elected to the position.

LAWRENCE K. LUNT.

Ever since Lunt entered Harvard university he has taken a conspicuous part in all of the college activities. He is a member of the student council, probably the most important of all the student organizations, holds a class office and is active in several other organizations. He will continue with the crew even though he declined the honor of the captaincy.

DENVER WINS FROM THE GOLDEN CYCLES

VISITORS TAKE GAME BY A SCORE OF 15 TO 10.

Shanholtzer's Delivery Fails to Puzzle the Athletic Club Players.

Shanholtzer's delivery failed to puzzle the batsmen of the Denver Athletic club, and as a result they easily defeated the Golden Cycles in a featureless game of indoor baseball at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The score was: Denver Athletic club, 15, Golden Cycles 10. The Denver team played seven men, with the outfield unprotected.

Tully, at second base for Denver, did several fast fielding stunts. The Golden Cycles were unable to make hits that would net runs.

The score by innings:

Denver A. C.	2	2	1	6	0	0	0	4	0	15
Golden Cycles	1	0	0	1	5	1	0	2	0	10

Hits: Denver Athletic club, 25, Golden Cycles 11.

NEW 10-MILE TRACK RECORD FOR BIG AUTO

De Palma Lowers Time Made by Oldfield in 1904 Mardi Gras Events.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—The principal feature of the first day's Mardi Gras automobile races was the lowering of the 10-mile world's track record for heavyweight gasoline cars by Ralph DePalma. In his Fiat "Cyclone" car he made the distance in 9:11 2-5, which is 11-5 seconds better than the record made by Barney Oldfield in 1904. DePalma made his record in the 267-mile handicap, defeating a field of five after having handicapped a full minute.

Mrs. Joan [illegible] broke her own records for five miles in the exhibition race, her first [illegible] which was the world's woman's records was 6:[illegible]. Mrs. Cuneo negotiated the turns with ease, and made them sharper than most of the men, and kept abreast of DePalma for the first 18 miles of the 50-mile race.

The features of Sunday's program will be the 100-mile event in which there will be 10 entries, including Mrs. Cuneo and DePalma.

INDIAN BILL PASSED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The Indian appropriation bill occupied almost the entire time of the Senate today and was passed with appropriations aggregating over $9,000,000. Of this amount $1,500,000 was added to the bill by Senate amendments.

Tent Cottage Sanatorium

105 CHEYENNE ROAD

These are homes intended for two or three people. They are fully equipped for light housekeeping, have three rooms, with electric lights, water, the best of beds, a north and a south porch, altogether securing all the comforts of the house with all the advantages of a tent. The circulation of air is so controlled that it can be warmed to suit the patient, or be just as cold as the air outside. They are within one block of the street car line, so the patients reach town with only one fare. The sun has free access to the cottages, both forenoon and afternoon. The treatment that is used in the sanatorium has been and is successful in controlling fever, night sweats, hemorrhages, and in getting rid of the bacilli in a short time, and in promoting a natural appetite with perfect assimilation of food. All who are interested in tuberculosis are cordially invited to visit this sanatorium and mingle with the patients and note their improvement. Correspondence invited.

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN,
Of Oregon.

ABOUT every shade of sturdy Americanism is to be found in the 15 new solons who will take their oaths inauguration day in the Senate when that body meets to await Mr. Taft's appointments.

The most picturesque of these newcomers is William O'Connell Bradley, the Republican who by the aid of minority votes has been elected by the Democratic legislature of Kentucky. He was one of those youthful prodigies, like Hamilton, who at birth seem to be marked for success. At 14 he left the school [illegible] to enlist in the Union army, and at the end of the war, when but 18, the Kentucky legislature, by the only [illegible] act of the kind ever passed, admitted him to the bar. At 23 he was prosecuting attorney, and at 25—barely past the age limit—a candidate for Congress. Again, at 28, two years under the legal age, he received his party's vote for the national senate. That was [illegible] years ago, and he has been nominated altogether five times for the toga which is now about to fall upon his shoulders. At 29 he polled his district's [illegible] Republican vote for Congress by 2,119. He declined the attorney generalship of Kentucky when 32, and when 33 was the orator chosen to second Grant's nomination at the Chicago convention, where he was one of the leaders of the famous "306." Arthur selected him to prosecute the star route grafters when he was still in his early thirties, but he and Brewster fell out over the method of prosecution. At 40 he was his party's choice for governor, and made a plucky fight, and at the convention which nominated Harrison gave him 105 votes for Vice President, the most ever cast for a southern Republican. Then, in 1895, after the most strenuous campaign ever seen in the state, he was elected the first and only Republican governor of Kentucky. Up to that time he had defended 107 men indicted for homicide, and only four of them had been convicted. And entering the Senate now, at 61, he is as strenuous as when he came into fame as the "boy attorney of Garrard." Some attribute his unusual force to the fact that through his mother he is a collateral descendant of the patriot, Daniel O'Connell, from whom he gets his middle name.

Unlettered Till After Marriage.

Another forceful character among these new members of the upper house is Joseph L. Bristow of Kansas. Born on a small Kentucky farm, he was untutored and unlettered when a mere lad of 18 he went west with his young bride of the Bluegrass to settle among the hills of southern Kansas and there, with an ax and plowshare, win for himself a homestead claim. At 21, now with a few hundred dollars saved, he decided to conquer the demon Ignorance, and entered a Methodist college, in which he went up and up until he found himself prepared for the ministry. To pay his college expenses and support his family he ran a country weekly, and this won him also a political power which he did not anticipate. His first reward came at 25, when elected clerk of the district court. He then gave up the ministry and became political reformer, and after buying now a daily paper he got up at 4 to edit it.

A mob with a battering ram soon after this stormed the county jail, captured a negro and marched him out with a noose about his neck. Bristow gathered a handful of men and pushed into the mob just as the rope was about to be flung over a telegraph pole. Bristow's men worked their way to the negro and by steadily pushing him ahead forced him next the open doorway of a building, in which he was suddenly hauled, Bristow brandishing a penknife and holding the door. Thus the black man was saved and it was later proved not only that he was innocent, but that the crime itself was a myth.

The young editor next brought a daily at Ottawa and became private secretary to the governor. Soon he was secretary of his party's state central committee and was ferreting out the lottery frauds in Kansas, which exposures resulted in the overthrow of the Populist administration. McKinley now heard of him and appointed him fourth assistant postmaster general. Three years later came rumors of the great postal frauds in Cuba, and Bristow was set to work to ferret them out. Without favor to friend or fear of foe he traced the guilt to high officials and landed the culprits in jail, while powerful political influence in Congress was used to free them and oust him. Forty inspectors were at work under him in the undertaking, which nearly lost him his sight. For a time he had to have all of his [illegible] read to him. Failure was brought to bear upon Roosevelt to oust him, but the strenuous President found Bristow to be a man after his own heart.

SENATOR BRADLEY,
Of Kentucky.

SENATOR BURTON,
Of Ohio.

He placed all of the postoffice inspectors directly under Bristow and intrusted him with a renovation of the department which landed more men in the penitentiary. In 1905 Roosevelt made him special commissioner to untangle the Panama railroad snarl and since his return home his neighbors have been booming him for the Senate. After all of this strenuous career he is now but 47.

Carpenter at 12.

Another of these precocious youths was Albert H. Cummins, who as successor to the late William B. Allison now comes as new senator from Iowa, where he has made a national reputation as the voice of the "Iowa idea" of tariff reduction on monopolized products. He was earning good wages as a carpenter when only 12. That was back in Pennsylvania, and he learned the trade from his father, who still lives, at the age of 86. Before he was 23 young Cummins had worked his way through college, then served successively as clerk, express messenger, self-taught surveyor and chief engineer of two railways. At 23, however, this prodigy entered a Chicago law office and soon after being admitted to the bar went to Des Moines, whence in 10 years he was sent to the Iowa legislature. He has just finished his third successful term as governor and has been four times a candidate for the Senate.

And still another prodigy was Theodore Elijah Burton, who has obtained Mr. Foraker's senatorial toga, the same which was coveted by Mr. Taft's brother, Charles P. Out in Jefferson, Ohio, where he was born 57 years ago young Burton, the parson's son, was the village oracle on the events of the Civil war. Although only 10 when that struggle commenced he devoured all of the newspaper dispatches, remembering every detail of the different armies' movements with a retentiveness that caused his elders to wonder. Those at the corner store who disputed over the moves of this general or that called in the youngster to clinch their arguments. Like a blindfolded chess genius, he carried in his mind each move of the blue and gray pieces on the great gameboard of war and he had the brain stuff in him to make another Napoleon. But he was frail in body, like most precocious youngsters, and he was packed off to his uncle's, in Iowa, there to recruit his strength in the fresh air and sunshine of the fields. He surprised the Iowans with his ability to quote Shakespeare page after page. After being graduated at Oberlin he stayed there as instructor of Greek and Latin, never having to use a textbook in his classes. Then he studied law and started in practice at Cleveland, where he lectured at the law schools, and it was the graduates of these schools who launched his first boom for Congress in 1888. He has been in the House for 20 years, with the exception of two terms, and has been chairman of the rivers and harbors committee, which annually controls appropriations of millions of dollars. He is also chairman of the vastly important inland waterways commission. When Tom Johnson was put up again for mayor of Cleveland in 1907 Mr. Burton's friends, backed by President Roosevelt, plead with him to make the fight, but he was unwilling. Finally, however, the Republican newspapers held a primary with ballots to be cut out by readers. When 20,000 of these came in for Mr. Burton he gave in and made a brave fight for a rather forlorn hope. He will be a recruit to the old bachelor phalanx of the Senate, whose most conspicuous members now are Senators Penrose and Kean.

Another man just promoted from the House to the Senate is Wesley L. Jones of North Yakima, Wash., affectionately called "Yakima Jones" out in that country. He is the youngest of the new senators, being but 44. Out in Bethany, Ill., he came into the world fatherless, his mother being a widow but three days when he arrived to compensate for her loss. She sent him to the district school and to college, where he made such a reputation as an orator that he was enlisted as a spellbinder for the Blaine campaign in 1884. He was then but 21. Then he read law in Chicago, but got the far western fever and moved to Washington just before its admission. He got a job in a real estate office, which kept him and his young wife going until he could start a law practice. Since that of Blaine he has been an orator in every campaign. He has been representative at large from Washington for the last 10 years.

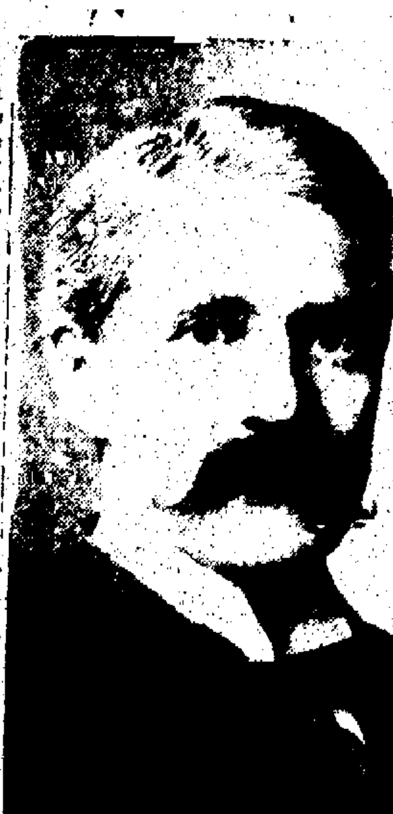

Chamberlain the Youngest.

There is one other new senator from the Pacific slope, George E. Chamberlain—who has been Democratic governor of Oregon for the last six years, and who resigns with two years still coming to him on his last term. He is a southerner, born in Natchez and educated at Washington and Lee university. Immediately after graduation he hiked out to Oregon, going to the legislature at 26, becoming district attorney at 30, attorney general at 37, and after that district attorney again, and then governor. He was 54 New Year day. His election to the Senate has been one of the great anomalies of American politics, the people having chosen him by direct vote, and the Republican legislature being compelled to elect him, instead of a man of their own faith. Thus has the Democratic legislature of Kentucky sent a Republican to the Senate, and the Republican legislature of Oregon a Democrat, and thus are the political accounts of the two parties balanced.

Two Who Went to Dakota.

North Dakota's new Senator, Martin L. Johnson, was born 59 years ago in Wisconsin, whence he was carried to Iowa when an infant in arms, and after being graduated at the State university there he was a schoolmaster two years in California. Then he returned to Iowa, studied law and served a term in both houses of the legislature. Next he pulled out for Dakota territory, took up a homestead claim, tacked up his shingle and got right into politics, becoming district attorney for two terms and representative in Congress for four terms.

South Dakota and Florida give their new togas to ex-governors. Coe Isaac Crawford, sent by the former state, is one more of these many Iowa products. After studying Latin and mathematics under private tutors, and graduating in law, he pulled out for the west when 24, and, like Senator-elect Johnson, hung out his shingle in Dakota territory. He also lost no time in climbing up the political ladder, first as county attorney, then as legislator, attorney general and governor. He is 51, just a year older than Governor Duncan Upshaw Fletcher, Florida's choice, who was born in Georgia, where his father, of a Virginia family, was an ante-bellum cotton planter and Confederate captain. The Senator-elect's mother died while his father was fighting and he was reared by relatives on the plantation. He went through Vanderbilt university, where, as class orator, he first showed his fitness for political leadership. His gift of oratory is said to have been inherited from his paternal grandfather, a Baptist preacher. Studying law also at Vanderbilt, he [illegible] one. Then he moved to Jacksonville and built up one of the richest practices in the state. He was elected to the legislature and was twice mayor of Jacksonville before being elected governor.

SENATOR CUMMINS,
Of Iowa.

Once a Hoosier Schoolmaster.

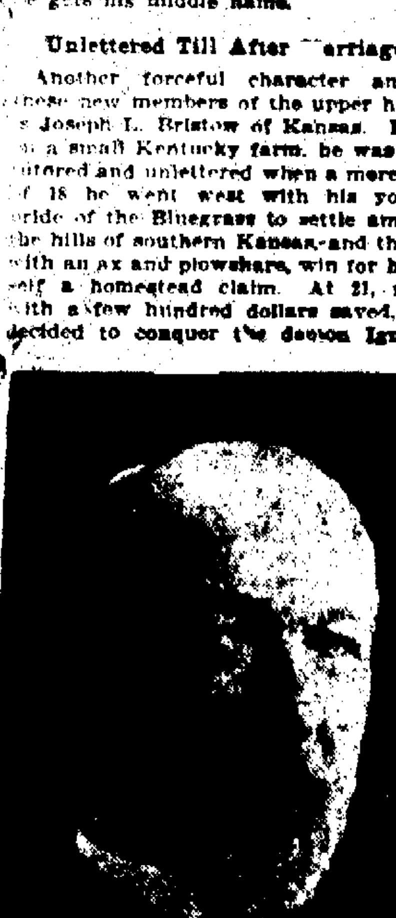

A former Hoosier schoolmaster, who studied law after entering Congress, is Benjamin F. Shively, the man who has just filched Indiana's senatorial toga from the disappointed Mr. Kern. After teaching four years in Indiana, he got into journalism, became a greenbacker, and at 27 was elected to Congress to fill out an unexpired term. During the following Congress he went through law school in Washington, hurrying home that summer to get another nomination to the national House. He was victorious, and sat in Congress for the next six years, getting upon the ways and means committee. Since then, for nearly 20 years, he has practiced law at South Bend, having received one nomination for governor and the Democratic vote of the legislature for Senator in 1903 and 1905.

As the Moses of the cotton planters of South Carolina, who in all parts of the state has preached to them the doctrine of holding their product for their own prices and controlling the market instead of submitting to it, E. D. Smith has won his way to the Senate without any previous record or experience in public life. He is the son of a Methodist preacher, the brother of a Methodist bishop and a graduate of Vanderbilt, the Methodist university, which was the alma mater also of Senator-elect Fletcher.

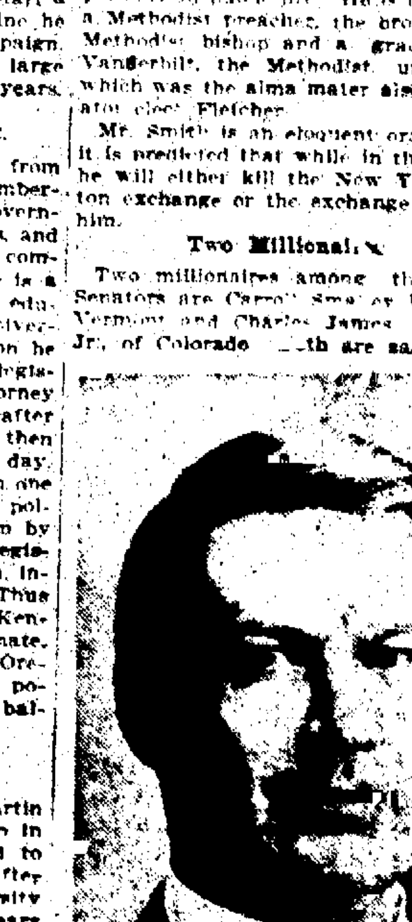

Mr. Smith is an eloquent orator, and it is predicted that while in the Senate he will either kill the New York Cotton exchange or the exchange will kill him.

Two Millionaires.

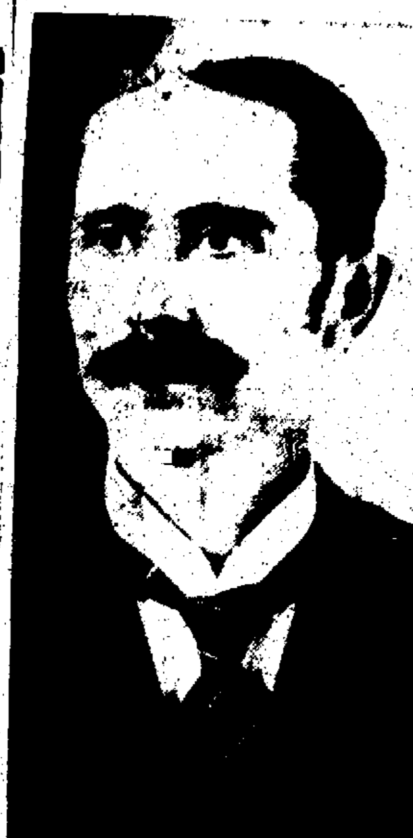

Two millionaires among these new Senators are Carroll Smalley Page of Vermont and Charles James Hughes, Jr., of Colorado. Both are said to be millionaires. Page, who is the largest dealer in green calfskins in the world, was born up in a Vermont country town 66 years ago, and after securing an academic education, got early into politics, being elected to the legislature when only 26, and elevated to the state senate when 31. Next he became state inspector of finance, and finally Governor. That was back in '90. He is the oldest of this year's new members of the upper House.

SENATOR PAGE,
Of Vermont.

SENATOR JONES,
Of Washington.

SENATOR BRISTOW,
Of Kansas.

Hughes built up his big fortune in the great southwest, and, like the many other millionaires of that prolific section, is a self-made man. He was a country boy, born on a farm out in Caldwell county, Missouri, although a Virginian by descent. When a youth he used to shoot prairie chickens on the site of the present Troost park, Kansas City, which was then a town of only 7,000 people. Then he went to school at Richmond, Mo., where he fell in love with the girl whom he afterward married. Next, after taking a year of law at the State university, he went to Denver and finished in the office of his uncle, General Bela M. Hughes, one of the Denver pioneers who had built up a large mining practice [illegible] in the '60s. When his uncle died, young Hughes succeeded to the practice, which he made the largest in the state, and so highly was he esteemed as an authority on his specialty that Harvard gave him the chair of mining law six years ago. He is a slender blonde, 56 years old and slightly lame. He succeeds the venerable Henry M. Teller, who retires, after representing Colorado in the Senate ever since it became a state, save only for the three years that he was secretary of the interior.

By far the most widely known of all these new Senators is Elihu Root, successor to Thomas C. Platt of New York. Forty-five years after he began his career as a schoolmaster up in New York state, Mr. Root, now at the age of 64, enters the Senate with the reputation of being a constructive statesman second to none in America today. While he was in his thirties President Arthur recognized his ability by appointing him United States attorney for the southern district of New York, the most lucrative berth in the gift of the administration. Less than a decade after leaving this office he was the leading legal factor in the revamping of the New York constitution, for he was chairman of the convention's judiciary committee. And since then, as secretary of war and of state, he has remodeled the army, has laid the groundwork for the reconstruction of our insular possessions, has made reciprocity agreements with six countries, has made arbitration treaties with 12 nations, has summoned Great Britain to trial for forcing opium upon China, and has concluded a peace pact with the mikado. And in between these frequent periods of public service, has managed to accumulate a fortune from his private law practice. It is somewhat paradoxical that Mr. Root resigns as premier of the cabinet to become Senator, and that Mr. Knox resigns as Senator to become premier, each feeling satisfied that, through this exchange of exalted stations, he has been promoted.

INTRUDER AMONG THE WAR DOGS

From Yale Alumni Weekly.

Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale went to West Point last fall to lecture. He was lecturing in the chapel, the cadets were rigidly paying attention, erect, eyes front, each man a ramrod of military etiquette. An Irish setter entered the chapel door and ambled sniffingly down the aisle and up on to the platform. The cadets squirmed under the eagle eyes of their officers, but not a man smiled. "Billy" noticed the strain. He looked down at the dog wagging its tail benevolently on the rostrum. "What! How's this?" said Professor Phelps. "A setter? Why, I expected to see nothing but West Pointers upp here."

WESTERN HOMESEEKING WITH BRASS BAND

Albuquerque Correspondence Denver Republican.

Prairie schooners carrying five German farmers and their families from Oklahoma, eighteen in all, have just arrived overland in Logan, in the eastern part of the territory, to settle in the surrounding farming country. The caravan of schooners was accompanied by 10 head of horses, and the first schooner carried a big German band of 12 pieces, the martial strains of "Die Wacht am Rhein" heralding the advent of the homeseekers.

MAMMOTH HATCHERY AGAIN BEING USED

SMALL, ORDINARY INCUBATOR IS ABOLISHED.

Poultry Men Wave New Line in the Day-Old-Chick Business—Haskin Tells of Industry.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

The action of several prominent American poultrymen in abolishing the ordinary small incubator, and returning to the ancient Egyptian style of mammoth hatchery, is still another proof that ingenuity gradually swings around the eternal circle until, for the introduction of a new idea, it merely adopts an old one. In comparing ancient and modern methods, as regards mammoth incubators and their successful operation, it is interesting to note the way the old Egyptians obtained eggs with which to fill their big hatcheries. Men with donkeys were sent out through the surrounding country for the purpose of gathering eggs and bringing them to the hatchery in lots of 2,000 at a time.

In our day of grace, 1909, we use the express company as our donkey. This branch of the poultry business that is being introduced into this country is known as the day-old-chick business. During the first 36 hours of a chick's life it does not require food, except such as it obtains from the absorption of the yolk of the egg from which it was hatched. During this time newly hatched chicks can be shipped with practically no mortality, which permits of their being sent hundreds of miles, or to any distance that can be reached by fast train within 36 hours.

Day-Old-Chick Business.

It is well known to the general public that eggs for hatching can be shipped long distances and still yield good percentages in chicks. The day-old-chick business, however, is something new under the sun. English poultrymen first tried the plan and soon found they could ship to all parts of the British Isles. Americans and Canadians then took up the idea, with the result that we now have a score or more of day-old-chick plants, some of them with hatching capacities of 10,000 to 20,000 eggs at one sitting. These plants may well be called public hatcheries. They advertise for people to ship eggs to them to be hatched at so much per egg, and then returned to the owners in the form of day-old chicks. Eggs for hatching in these public hatchers can be delivered by express for distances ranging from [illegible] to 500 miles with good results.

Compare the way this same scheme is worked in Egypt. According to an official report the artificial hatching of eggs in that country has been practiced so long that the hens have completely abandoned that part of their work to man. It is a regular industry and the professors form a very close corporation, handing down their secrets from father to son. The population of Egypt is very dense, about 700 per square mile. This [illegible] of large incubators, turning out each from 300,000 to 400,000 chicks in a [illegible]. Instead [illegible] village there are from [illegible] to [illegible] of these establishments. They are generally near to some important market place, and each one is apparently in the center of a district of about 50,000 population. That is, each one is the center of a circle having a radius of five miles. It is the density of population that has allowed this system of artificially hatching to become so very successful. At the same time it must be remembered that there is no other, as the native hen never sits on her eggs.

Sold as Soon as They Leave Shell.

Another important point is that the hatcheries do not attempt to rear the young broods. Forty eight hours after the chicks emerge from the shell they are scattered over the country. This distribution is effected in a very simple manner. As the incubator is near a market place, word is sent there on such a day there will be so many young chicks. This news is quickly disseminated among the villages, and on the appointed day the women arrive with cages to purchase the young chicks, which are generally sold for about $1.50 per 100. There are also a number of brokers or dealers who take the young chicks to the most distant villages. For this they have cages made from palm branches. Two such cages will transport each 1,000 young birds, so that a man with a donkey easily manages 2,000 of them, and by nightfall has probably sold the entire lot at a distance of five or six miles from the establishment.

Once in the village the chicks become the property of the women, who take great care of them during the first week. For two or three days they are kept in cages in lots of 20 or 30 and fed on broken grain slightly moistened. At night the cages are taken into the houses and sometimes covered with a bit of cloth. After these first few days the young birds are strong enough to forage for a living and are then allowed to roam about freely. When the young chicks are fairly feathered they are plucked perfectly clean and slightly greased. This adds greatly to their health but detracts much from their beauty. It strikes a stranger as something extremely novel to see hundreds of perfectly naked chickens [illegible] in the sun and running about.

Largest Incubator Built.

The largest incubator built on the Egyptian plan in this country, or in the world for that matter, is on a duck ranch on Long Island, which section produces more ducks each season than any other area of equal extent in the world. This one plant annually produces about 70,000 ducklings, the [illegible] of which are sold in New York city. Sometime ago the proprietor lost his incubator plant by a fire which broke out in the night from an unknown cause. He not only suffered the loss of his building, but 53 lamp-heated machines, each with a capacity for holding 200 duck eggs. Many of these machines were full of eggs at the time and several contained newly hatched ducklings ready for removal. As a safeguard against future loss of this kind the proprietor decided to build a mammoth incubator.

This big machine has 96 compartments and has a total capacity of 25,000 duck eggs, or nearly 50,000 hen eggs. It is heated by hot water pipes that extend throughout each tier of compartments. The consumption of fuel in the [illegible] heated, hot-water baths is regulated automatically by thermostatic action; the temperature of the water at the point where it enters each tier of compartments is controlled in a similar manner, and the heat of each hatching chamber is governed by a standard thermostat, thus taking care of the animal heat generated in the eggs after they have been incubated two or three weeks.

Cost of [illegible]

Thirty to 50 cents worth of hard coal will operate this big machine during a period of 24 hours, the amount consumed per day depending on the [illegible] season of the year. [illegible] It is [illegible] that not more than 10 per cent as much labor is required to care for this [illegible] hatcher as will be necessary to [illegible] an equal [illegible] eggs are [illegible] without removing [illegible] There are no [illegible] to fill, no [illegible] to trim, and no fumes of [illegible] the air of the [illegible] cellar. Any woman [illegible] waist high can [illegible] she could [illegible] no more physical [illegible]. Undoubtedly the success [illegible] of these big machines [illegible] the beginning of a great revolution in the poultry industry of the United States.

As [illegible] an incubator of this [illegible] could hatch from 75 to 80 per cent of [illegible] or duck [illegible] tells [illegible] there was an [illegible] law, [illegible] the [illegible] that the proprietor of a [illegible] incubator must deliver to [illegible] hatchable eggs at [illegible] for each 100 [illegible]. At the [illegible] incubators can be [illegible] to hatch 75 to 80 per cent of [illegible]. Very much depends on the health and vigor of the breeding [illegible]. "If the kick is in the egg," as the [illegible] there is no question but that the [illegible] of incubator will make good.

Public [illegible]

In all probability [illegible] in agricultural sections where poultry [illegible] important products [illegible] public hatcheries [illegible] ing this [illegible] labor, fuel, [illegible] This is not [illegible] a prediction. [illegible] this [illegible] for [illegible] years. A [illegible] amount of [illegible] on numerous [illegible] by the use of small portable [illegible]. Now that we have the [illegible] hot-water [illegible] ment machine to [illegible] the labor item fully 80 per cent, and the expense of fuel fully 50 per cent, we [illegible] expect this branch of the business to develop rapidly if for no other reason than it will take care of the question of using lamp-heated or oil-heated incubators in dwellings or other buildings covered by fire insurance policies.

This question of the hazard from lamp or oil-heated machines is at present the most important [illegible] concerning the incubators of one kind or another in use in the United States [illegible], and so many of these are of faulty construction that enormous property losses have resulted from fires originating in their use. The average poultry house is inflammable and is usually beyond the reach of the protection facilities; consequently the National Board of Fire Underwriters, representing practically all the standard fire insurance companies now doing business in the United States and Canada, insist that all incubators going on the market hereafter shall bear an inspection label or be prohibited from use in or adjacent to buildings covered by insurance. The excitement that this mandate has created in the world of incubator manufacturers may well be imagined from the fact that of the 35 odd different machines now being made in this country, less than half a dozen can qualify under their existing patents.

PROTECTING THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

DR. H. W. HOAGLAND, Chairman of the Committee on Health and Sanitation of the Charter Convention, has made a report which certainly ought to be enacted into law, preferably as a part of the Charter, but if that may not be done, in the form of an ordinance. This report, which was printed in full in yesterday's Gazette, provides for the creation of a Department of Health and Sanitation, and defines the duties of the Health Commissioner and his subordinates and the measures which should be taken to protect the health of the community. A particularly important clause is the following:

Every physician in the city shall forthwith report, in writing, to the department of health and sanitation, every patient he shall have sick of any infectious, contagious or communicable disease, dangerous to the public health, and every householder, upon notice from the health department that an occupant of his or her house is suffering from any such contagious or communicable disease, dangerous to the public health, shall forthwith adopt such preventative means and regulations as the department of health and sanitation shall prescribe. Every physician who shall fail to report such cases of disease as required herein, and every householder who shall fail to comply with the rules, requirements and regulations of the department of health and sanitation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be subject to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100.

With the exception of one measure this is precisely the health law suggested by The Gazette on Thursday, the exception being that no provision is made for compulsory fumigation of rooms that are let to tenants. In our opinion it would be better to include all of these provisions in the Charter, but if the Charter Convention does no more than adopt Dr. Hoagland's recommendations it will have taken a long step forward, and an ordinance can afterwards be passed providing for compulsory fumigation.

SOME MEANS OF INFECTION. A contributor to the Open Parliament today, writing on the prevention of tuberculosis, calls attention to the public drinking fountain at the corner of Tejon Street and Pikes Peak Avenue as "the most conspicuous offense against sanitation." Perhaps the fountain is not the most serious offense of all, but it is bad enough and ought to be removed. It certainly is not beautiful, and its usefulness is very doubtful. And though it may be a convenience to many people, there is not the slightest question that as a possible means of spreading tuberculosis and other infectious diseases it is distinctly a menace to the public health. If the Council regards the advantages of a drinking fountain at that corner as a necessity, by all means let it be of a different type, one in which cups are dispensed with and the drinking is done from a jet of water. This is the modern, sanitary method, and all over the country public fountains of this type are being installed to supersede the old variety from which everybody drinks from the same cup, no matter how old and dirty and germ-laden it may be.

There is every reason why Colorado ought to be in advance of all other states in the matter of health legislation, particularly legislation designed to prevent the spread of tuberculosis, but the truth is that it has done practically nothing at all. Only five states in the Union, including the District of Columbia, have laws directly compelling the reporting and registration of tuberculosis, and Colorado does not figure in the list. Neither have we a state law forbidding spitting in public places, though eight other states have enacted such a statute.

In Colorado Springs we have an ordinance forbidding spitting, but it is as utterly disregarded both by the authorities and the public as some of our other ordinances. Every policeman in town—and certainly those in the business district—sees this ordinance violated many times every day, but who ever heard of one of them arresting anybody for it? There is no earthly excuse for the practice, for the fact is perfectly established that it is the most dangerous of all means of spreading tuberculosis, and aside from its sanitary aspect it is absolutely disgusting, but our complacent police permit it to be done with impunity, on the streets, in the parks, and in other public places. Of course, it would be impossible for them to prevent it altogether, but they certainly could prevent the most of it.

OUR HEALTH LAWS SHOULD BE A MODEL. From the standpoint of health, Colorado Springs ought to be a model city so far as it is possible to do this by the enactment and rigid enforcement of intelligent laws. Every natural condition is advantageous, but it is this very fact that has made us careless. We leave too much to nature, we depend too much on the curative effects of air and sunlight. Nature has done its share in making this the finest sanatorium in the country for the cure of tuberculosis, but the very fact that it is a sanatorium imposes a responsibility on the people and on the city government that has been too long evaded.

It is reasonable to assert that if no victim of tuberculosis had ever come to Colorado Springs there never would have been a single case here, for no case has ever originated here that was not due to direct infection from others. But such persons do live here by thousands; we invite them to come and we treat them, and to evade in any degree the responsibility that their presence places upon us is nothing less than criminal neglect.

The adoption of a charter gives an opportunity to make the sweeping changes that have long been needed, and for the credit of Colorado Springs as well as for the health of the whole community, the opportunity should not be neglected.

MR. BRYAN, ONCE MORE.

GRACIOUS goodness! listen to this

Denver, Feb 20—"Everybody who knows anything or who has any sense at all, knows how I stand in the matter of being a candidate for the presidency a fourth time," said William J Bryan, today, when asked if he would again be a candidate. "I have made myself clear on this subject time and again," he continued, "and if the people haven't sense enough to understand it, why, what's the use of explaining it all over again?

"I am not an out-and-out candidate, but if the people of this country—if my own party should demand that I make the race again, standing for my well-known principles and ideas, why, I do not very well see how I could refuse. Still, four years is a long time, and meanwhile I have other important work to do"

Has some faithless reporter been misquoting the Peerless One, or have three disappointments made him petulant? "And if the people have not sense enough to understand it"—that does not sound like the suave, oleaginous gentleman who has spent three campaigns on the rear platform of a parlor car telling "the people" of his undying love and esteem. But the next sentence has a more familiar ring. "I am not an out-and-out candidate, but if the people of this country demand that I make the race again I do not see how I could refuse." That reads like a page—almost any page—from the history of Democratic politics of the last twelve years.

Mr Bryan never has been "an out-and-out candidate"—Oh, no! He has been a perpetual candidate though, unchanging, unswerving, the same yesterday, today and forever. He has elevated what was formerly merely an incident to a political career into one of the learned professions, and has practiced it so assiduously that it has made him rich. His ear has been attuned to the voice of the people, and whenever the call of duty sounded, no matter if it were only a whisper, he heard it as plainly as if it were an alarm clock.

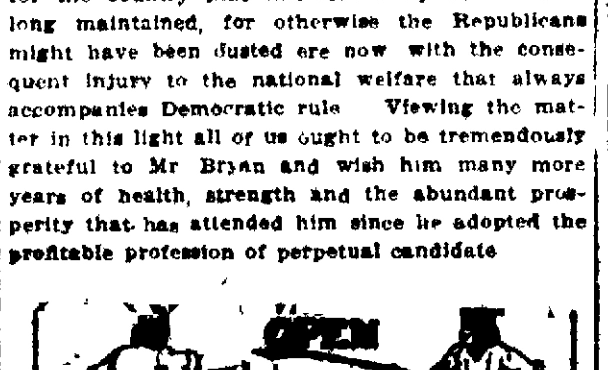

THE CALL OF THE PEOPLE. But he has had a decent regard for the proprieties. He has not insisted—publicly—that his party accept him, on the contrary he has coyly declared that under no conditions would he accept a nomination unless the people demanded it. Of course, the people never demanded anything of the sort, but just the same he has managed three times to land a nomination. For a year prior to the holding of the convention which last nominated him the people did all they could to make it plain that so far from demanding him as their candidate they demanded that he step down and out and make way for a better man, but through his control of his party's machinery he again succeeded in landing the prize, and incidentally in wrecking the party for another four years.

It probably will be quite a while before Mr. Bryan realizes that he is a political dead duck. At any rate he does not realize it now—that much is shown by the above expression. But the plain truth is that he is no longer a Presidential certainty, or even a possibility. He has no more chance of getting the Democratic nomination four years hence than if he had never [illegible], for however dense may be the traditional stupidity of the Democratic party, it has at last learned the lesson which it ought to have learned twelve years ago, namely that the leadership of William J. Bryan means only one thing—crushing defeat.

The question of whether or not the people want him for President has been submitted three times, and in the interval between the first and last times the people had abundant chance to study Mr Bryan and revise any error of judgment that they might have made at first. But in all cases the result was the same, and the returns show that long acquaintance with him has only served to intensify their distrust and dislike. They do not want him and will not have him, and, inasmuch as the principal object of nominating a Presidential candidate is to elect him, the Democrats have at last learned that it is suicidal folly to nominate Bryan.

TOO BAD HE CAN'T HOLD ON. At present they are groping in the dark. It is still too soon after the November election to expect a reorganization under the leadership of some other man. Perhaps he will be no better than Bryan, but at any rate there will be a change and the fact in itself means a great deal.

For the sake of the Republican party we are sorry that this will happen, for no better assurance of a perpetuation of Republican rule can be asked than the continued leadership of the opposition by Mr Bryan. Indeed, it is a fortunate thing for the country that this leadership has been so long maintained, for otherwise the Republicans might have been ousted ere now with the consequent injury to the national welfare that always accompanies Democratic rule. Viewing the matter in this light all of us ought to be tremendously grateful to Mr Bryan and wish him many more years of health, strength and the abundant prosperity that has attended him since he adopted the profitable profession of perpetual candidate.

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Your article on the public health is excellent. Perhaps its only fault is, that like most sanitary directions, it is too polite to be definite. If we assume that the ordinary "sanitary precautions" are known to the majority of consumptives who are occupying the cheaper lodgings, how many of them are in a position to carry them out?

It is well enough to talk of an ordinance requiring all tuberculosis cases to be reported, but what then? The main thing is to destroy the sputum; and how are the occupants of the cheap lodgings to afford the necessary receptacles, or find the means of destroying? It is little use to give people directions for sanitation to those who have neither the intelligence nor the means to carry them out. Nor will public sentiment sustain a law requiring stringent supervision of consumptives, unless along with the law runs a provision for the municipal care of the indigent. In the sanatoria the sputum is incinerated so that no danger of infection is possible but this cannot be done by the masses who have no heating apparatus but a small gas stove!

Millions of dollars are raised for pathological study, and for housing the well-to-do-cases. But the chief source of infection lies with those for whom no provision is made. They must either be isolated, or, where that is not possible, they must be furnished with the means for caring for their sputum. This could be done by furnishing them with sputum cups, and collecting and destroying these at public expense.

It is difficult to enforce even the existing laws. A sufficient proof of this is to be found on the floors of the street cars and public buildings.

Doubtless the efforts of various societies to 'stamp out' the disease are well meaning, and often effective. But of what use is the advice to a housewife not to dust with a feather duster, when people are expectorating freely and constantly in the gutters?

Last summer, in one of the public parks, a poor chap in the last stages of the disease, and blind at that, sat day after day playing a small hand organ, and spitting in every direction. About him on the walk were scores of little children walking in the filth, and myriads of flies were carrying the infection into the people's homes.

The most conspicuous offense against sanitation is the public drinking fountain, and for this the city or the health board is directly responsible. Stand at the corner of Pikes Peak avenue and Tejon street, and watch the procession of consumptives, and alcoholics, drinking from the common cup. Then see a mother with her young baby put its lips to the same rim!

It is not so much a matter of law or charter. Probably the health board has sufficient authority. Two things are chiefly necessary. Awake public sentiment and furnish the money to care for the indigent sick. HENRY B. ELY.

DR. GRENFELL'S BOOKS.

To the Editor of The Gazette

It has occurred to me that the many persons who during the present week have become interested in Dr Grenfell and in his work may be glad to know the titles of some of his books. Let me name

1 'Off the Rocks,' published by the Sunday School Times company.
2 "The Harvest of the Sea."
3. "Vikings of Today"
4. 'Dr Grenfell's Parish,' by Norman Duncan
5 'Along the Labrador Coast,' by C W Townsend, M D
6 Grenfell of Labrador,' by James Johnston
7 "A Man's Faith," by Dr Grenfell.
(1) "How to Obtain Faith in Jesus Christ"
(2) "How to Retain Faith."
(3) "How to Use Faith."

This last is an attractively issued little brochure of 48 pages, published by the Pilgrim Press 14 Beacon street, Boston

Besides these publications let me name "Among the Deep-Sea Fishers," a quarterly magazine devoted entirely to the work. Subscription 50 cents may be sent to Miss E. E. White, 14 Beacon street, Boston. The January number is singularly interesting. It contains 11 pages of Dr Grenfell's log and the story of his rescue as told by one of his rescuers, and rendered in the vernacular by Miss Jessie Luther, and bright sketches by men and women engaged in different departments of the work, hospital, educational, etc., and a map of the Labrador coast with the Grenfell stations.

A FESTIVAL CHORUS.

To the Editor of The Gazette.

The movement toward organizing a festival chorus is a step in the right direction. Why not expand the idea to include a permanent symphony orchestra to be used in conjunction with the chorus where orchestra work is needed, and to give us some of the best of the instrumental works as well?

Why cannot we use our own musicians, make the movement a genuine benefit to Colorado Springs and her own people? Why is it necessary to give all the honor and glory and what little money there may be to outside people?

Encourage and develop home products and make the benefit a permanent thing.

MORAL COURAGE

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A young man was engaged by the inventor of a flimsy flying machine the other day to launch himself from a height of 100 feet at Coney Island. The result was recorded in the news. The machine failed to work according to specifications, and the operator and machine tumbled into the ocean. The youth, who swam to safety, was evidently very chary of his task before he "flew." At the last moment of preparation the spectators noted that he "shook and trembled visibly," his "legs knocked together" and his very teeth seemed to chatter, so great were the agitations of his mind and body. And yet he never thought of recoiling; he jumped.

The common interpretation of his trembling was that he was a coward, but that was a mistake. The man who sees the danger so clearly that he is afraid and nevertheless goes on, exhibits one of the very highest forms of courage, a species of moral courage, even though the feat be foolhardy. A stolid man to whom the extreme hazards do not so clearly appear may be given credit for physical courage when he undertakes a difficult feat. A strong, rugged, powerful man, accustomed to perils, who performs another perilous feat is a courageous man, to be sure. Courage is habit with him; in a way constitutional. He is trained to be courageous. But when naturally weak or timid or delicate men or women, untrained to stress and storm and used to hardships and danger, confront dangers which appear doubly terrible to them, and carry the adventure to the end without flinching, though their very souls may be shaken, they exhibit the mastery of mind and heart over matter, a combination of mental and moral courage, something of that character which gives "splendor to youth and awe to wrinkled skin and gray hairs."

Physical courage of a high kind is a very necessary quality in the world, and always will be, but the world is not now suffering especially from the lack of that sort of courage. One may see it on every hand. Physicians, nurses, firemen, soldiers and seamen, locomotive engineers and brakemen, policemen, prize fighters, football players, balloonists, handlers of dynamite, acrobats and those engaged in hundreds of other hazardous occupations exhibit a rare degree of courage or recklessness without paying much heed to the risk. In some instances the courage is merely physical hardness, such as is displayed by a well-trained game cock, which will fight to the death. In other instances there is a mixture of physical and moral courage which ennobles the quality of the courage.

There is however a species of courage—moral courage—which is a very rare quality. The great test of moral courage is a man's ability to withstand the opinion or the criticism of others. It requires moral courage to enable a man to go his own way in the world in the face of hostile feeling or criticism, even when he knows that he is right, notwithstanding that he believes that his very critics in their hearts know him to be right. It is a curious fact that the capacity to risk life in tasks hazardous to life and limb is much more common than the capacity to display that moral courage which endangers only a man's pocket or his popularity among men whose morals, character and judgment he thoroughly believes to be inferior to his own.

John Stuart Mill said that the creation of this sort of courage was one of the chief ends of civilization.

The character itself should be to the individual, a paramount end, simply because the existence of this ideal nobleness of character, or a near approach to it, in any abundance, would go farther than all things else toward making human life happy, both in the comparatively humble sense of pleasure and freedom from pain and in the higher meaning of rendering life not what it now is almost universally puerile and insignificant, but such as human beings with highly developed faculties can care to have.

The only product of civilized society which are of overwhelming importance are men and women of splendid character and of high moral courage joined to intelligence. All the rest, the mills and factories, the steam engines and steamships, the magnificent buildings and highways, the output of the steel mills, the exports and imports, the very libraries and universities, the discoveries in chemistry and medicine, every material and industrial expedient and advance all, all are only so much machinery, which not only indicate but emphasize the failure unless the country may exhibit men of splendid moral courage and strong character.

The man of trained intelligence is rare, the man who thinks for himself is rare, and the man who possesses true moral courage is marked in any community. The very men who oppose him and deride him and hate him secretly admire and envy him. He is the only free man and is a subject to naught in this world but his own conscience. He is the real leader. The others only follow the popular error which virtue and intelligence will in time throw down and abuse. The men of moral courage are really the rulers of the world. They are the prophets and builders of the future, the constructors of the fabric which cannot be destroyed, layers of foundations. Their ideas will ultimately prevail, and their example is a beacon to the next generation. They are the splendor of the universe, and all others are somewhat only as they approximate in their lives and character to the real leaders who may be in their own day only very obscure and unsuccessful men.

THE OUTCOME OF FEAR-BREEDING.

The greatest boon to human life is the quality of fearlessness. If a man can look at the face of his foe with clear eyes, unflinching and unafraid, the battle is half won. It is the coward who fails before he tries. And true religion should give men this splendid quality of fearlessness. Where it does not, it is unworthy. Where it teaches man to fear—to fear even God—it is a curse. In whatever church you see men groveling in fear before God, making frenzied petition for mercy, you will find a force that is working directly for evil against both the individual and the state. God wants no coward's worship. He wants a brave man's confidence and service.

THE EXILE'S RETURN.

"'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark"
Yelp welcome as the laborer homeward turns,
'Tis sweet at sea, when wireless nights are dark
To catch the hail that through the ether burns.
But, oh! of all the joys of wand'ring far,
Of all the sweets that to the senses cling—
I choose ah, simple choice!—to see a car
Marked "Broadway" and to hear its sweet "ding-dong."

From the sublime of verse I may descend
But when you've mooned a year or two away;
Trying to find the world's endest end,
Chasing the sun to find perpetual day,
The true sublime occurs to you at last—
The "coming back," where absence has made fond
Full many a recollection of the past—
A human frailty and a human bond.

Manhattan Island, where I was not born,
But where I lived and loved and toiled—and worse!
Thou wert sublime, ridiculous a thing
In my poor side and thee I oft didst curse.
But, oh! it's great to be with thee again
To bask in [illegible] sunshine, and to hear
The clanging of fire engines and the throb
Of [illegible] and tongues and "hustle's on the job"—
To be back in the ranks of busy life,
And say ten times a day, "I'm glad I'm HERE!"

IMAGINATION AND RUNAWAY HORSES

From the Chicago Post.

Fireman James Dempsey of Engine company 33, happened to be at leisure yesterday on State street near Washington, was able to give a rare and almost gaudy exhibition of the power of imagination when applied to small details. Mr Dempsey perceived a runaway horse plunging toward the crowd of shoppers, unrestrained by the conventional bridle. At once he applied himself to the back of the frightened animal, and, leaning forward, thrust his fingers into its mouth to produce the impression of its familiar steering apparatus. Under this jury rudder, so to speak, the horse was cleanly turned back to the middle of the street and then brought to a halt a block farther on. Mr. Dempsey seems to us not only a physical hero, but a creative artist of unusual genius. His kind of imagination has Rider Haggard's kind beaten a mile.

DISABILITIES OF A "TRUST."

From the New York Tribune

"Sinners stand in slippery places," and so do the "trusts." At least, that is the conclusion from the decision of the United States supreme court in the Continental Wall Paper company case, handed down recently. The wall paper company sued to collect a bill of $57,000 from one of its customers. The delinquent customer replied that the company could not collect the money because it was a monopoly, and therefore illegal. And the court held five to four, that, being an illegal combination, it could not use the courts to collect its debts. And this collocation suggests the reflection that the fact that a bet is not collectable by a legal action has never interfered seriously with betting or with the collecting of bets. It is a matter of "honor" to pay a bet. So the new decision may not seriously interfere with "trusts" and combinations in the collection of their debts.

ADE AND THE ENGLISHMAN.

Earmarks of Authenticity.

A Berlin Interview That Bears the Beau Broadway, in the New York Telegraph.

The correspondent of an English newspaper says he interviewed George Ade in Berlin and that the American funny man told him he would rather be a German army officer than anything else on earth except an Englishman. Of course, the Englishman asked for a diagram and this he says, is what George answered:

"I merely meant to express by implication a firm belief that the Englishman is the most fortunate being in the universe, but one he never has even a glimmering doubt as to the superiority of himself or his English environment.

"I should like to wear a tweed suit that bunched in the neck and bagged at the knees, and still feel serenely confident that I was well dressed. I should like to feel assured that the best seat next to the windows and all of the luggage racks were mine by divine right. When defeated at any game I should like to soothe my pride by the reflection that the victory of the opposition must have been the result of appalling accident or due to some new fangled trickery too complicated to be understood by thorough sportsman.

"I envy the Englishman because even in his most cordial moments he patronizes all other human beings and carries a banner advertising the fact."

I think this interview is probably authentic.

THE LOWLY HAS RISEN.

From the Kansas City Journal

The low, despised cocklebur, the ornament of cows' tails and dog hair—threatens to take a seat among the mighty. Long has this little sticky pest been the bane of the Kansas farmer, an object of hate to the milkmaid and of fear and loathing to the barefooted boy. Even faithful Old Fido has dodged and ducked the tentacled bur. But the lowly has risen, and wants to get into the polite society of alfalfa, cotton, wheat, and corn. It wants a page in Secretary Coburn's ledger—it wants a place in the earnings column. All this is brought about by some man who claims that the cocklebur produces valuable oil. Some time ago they said that the Russian thistle makes fine paper. There is one certain thing about it all anyway and that is there won't be much trouble in gathering them. The wind will stack up the thistles and few old cows and faithful Tiges will bring in all the cockleburs.

The Man Who Saw Spring

By John J. Neihardt (Copyright) Author of "THE LONESOME TRAIL"

IT WAS late in October when the Jennie Lucas cast off her cables at the Fort Union landing, swung out into the Missouri, and under high pressure went grunting and snoring southward. Old river men about the Fort watched her trailing cloud of smoke until she had disappeared, then shook their heads and muttered dark prophecy. For, although she was the lightest and fastest boat in the upper waters at that time (for which reason she was chosen to carry a very important message from the Fort to St. Louis, yet no boat is so swift as the prairie winter—and the winter was coming early that year. The old men read warnings upon the face of the heavens and sniffed treachery in the damp south wind. They recalled other Octobers when the winter had swooped down suddenly; they spoke of blizzards, they recalled the names of companions who had perished, they talked of hunger.

But the Lucas laden heavily with an ever-decreasing cargo of firewood, and groaning through all her strained machinery, raced into the south.

She had made only a hundred miles when a bolt head in the boilers gave way under the abnormal pressure of steam, and it became necessary to lay up for repairs.

Jim Hanway the head engineer, worked upon the boilers with a nervous haste that attracted the attention of the captain.

"Take your time, Jim," said the captain; "there's no hurry."

"No hurry?" Hanway grinned with twitching lips at the captain. "Take a look at the sky, will you? If we don't all turn up in some coyote's belly before spring, you can thank me and this engine!"

The captain endeavored to laugh pleasantly, but succeeded only in producing a dry cackle. Certainly something had come over Hanway. The tall, gaunt, good-natured engineer was no longer good-natured. There was a drawn, set look in his face, and the whole engine room seemed filled with some strange disquieting influence, some subtle emanation from overwrought nerves.

The captain went upon deck. "Jim's got a case of cold feet," he said to the pilot, "nerves all frayed out to a ragged edge. Talks about us all turning up in some coyote's belly before spring! What do you think of that for Hanway?"

"The way he's been giving her the whip so far, he'll be blowing us to kingdom come, more likely," said the pilot. "I yelled down the tube for less speed a dozen times, and he went right on slamming the speed to her. Want to look after him a bit, captain?"

Meanwhile, Hanway worked nervously at the boilers. He reinforced them with other bolts and belted them with iron hoops, all the while muttering to himself. A deck hand, tottering under a log of wood, ventured to joke with the engineer. Hanway turned upon him and snarled with a savage lifting of the upper lip. "If you roosters don't get this engine room full of wood before we start," he said, "I'll brain the last one of you!"

The "rooster" deposited his load and withdrew at a trot.

On the morning of the second day of the delay the Lucas again started south. Hanway bawled up the tube to the pilot at the wheel. "Don't go yelling any more instructions down here to me! This boat is going somewhere!"

He turned to his engine, now throbbing mightily like an overtaxed heart. "Don't give up, old girl!" he muttered. "Don't give up again! I know it's a killing pace, but hold together somehow!"

In the late evening the Lucas ran foul of a snag and came off with a shattered paddle-wheel. This required two days for repairing, during which time it began to snow with great, wet, lazily tumbling flakes, that fell melting upon the deck like soft kisses of betrayal. Hanway grew more and more nervous as he helped at the repairing of the paddles.

"Are you sick, Jim?" asked the captain kindly; for Hanway fumbled the tools with shaking hands and dropped them often.

"No, not sick, cap," answered Hanway with a strange tremor in his voice. "But it seems like I can feel something coming—something—I don't know what—something big and black and terrible moving down upon us. I know it's foolish."

"Oh, this is just a little flurry," said the captain, soothingly. "Too early for real winter, Jim. Better go to bed awhile and let the second engineer run her tonight. You're worn out."

When the damage had been repaired, the Lucas started south with the second engineer at the throttle. The Lucas was now running night and day, for something of the dread of Hanway had come upon the captain.

In the middle of the night Hanway awoke with a start from a heavy sleep. He arose at once and went on deck, for he had not undressed. The snow had ceased falling and a northwest wind, with a keen knife edge, smote him in the face. He listened for a moment to the chug-chug of the revolving paddle wheels, the sigh of the waters about her sides and the asthmatic snore of the exhaust. Suddenly he thought he caught the tinkling sound of small ice particles. He rushed to the thermometer, and striking a watch, gazed for a moment horror-stricken upon the mercury. It registered 31 degrees!

The match flared and went out. Hanway shivered in the sudden darkness as though he had just gazed upon the face of a corpse. He glanced at the pilot house and saw the pilot swinging a free arm about him to warm his numbed fingers.

Hanway ran down the aft stairs and burst into the engine room. He rushed past the second engineer and glanced at the steam gauge. It registered 10 pounds less than he himself had been carrying.

"Get to bed!" he hissed to the engineer.

"I don't go off till morning, Jem," replied the other kindly.

"You go off now—d'ye hear?"

Hanway grasped the second engineer by the shoulders, and, with the aid of a vigorous foot, hurled him bodily through the door, which he bolted. Then he strode over to the lounging firemen and lifted each to his feet with a violent kick.

"I want steam!" he growled. "What d'you think you're tending—a tea kettle?"

The firemen fell to work sullenly, and soon the Lucas felt the feverish will of her new master throbbing through her every fiber. Hanway stood before the steam gauge with his gaze fixed upon the rising indicator. She now carried 50 pounds. With the reinforced boilers he figured that she could carry 55; after that she would probably blow up.

Fifty-one—fifty-one and a half—fifty-two—fifty-three—fifty-four — fifty-four and a half—

Hanway, with his gloved hand on the lever of the safety valve, muttered to his engine: "One quarter more, old girl! Hang on! You can't go back on me now! It's a good race and we can win—we can win—if—"

Hanway lifted the lever and the steam howled out through the valve, filling the room with vapor. The indicator had crept up within a hair's breadth of fifty-five. It now dropped back to fifty-four and a half. Hanway closed the valve, and again the pressure mounted slowly toward the danger mark. Backward and forward crept the indicator between the half and the number upon which Hanway gazed transfixed, his nervous hand clutching the lever.

He was racing with the winter, and the whips of his own dread goaded him. In his overwrought imagination he saw the pitiless Spirit of the North bearing steadily down upon the fleeing little Lucas like a great white bird of prey. He knew what it meant to be overtaken—five months of the great white waste and probably starvation. And so he was running, running. Down at St. Louis there was warmth and food and good cheer, and up in this savage wilderness there would be only the taunting devils of the frost and the hunger and the silence.

"Here, one of you!" he bawled to the firemen. "Scramble out on deck and tell me how the mercury stands!"

One obeyed and came back with chattering teeth. "Twenty-nine," he said.

"Work lively with that wood there!" snarled Hanway, again turning to the steam gauge. The indicator had crept a hair's breadth across the danger mark. He set his teeth and held the valve down until the needle registered fifty-five and three-quarters. "She'll stand it!" he muttered with a nervous grin. "She's good for fifty-six!"

As a man who rides a thoroughbred in a race for life and loves the good brute for responding to the spurs, so Hanway loved his engine. Curiously enough, he felt that he and the machinery were one being, and he caught himself gritting his teeth and groaning with the intense strain under which the engine sobbed and whined.

The boat was now quivering through all her timbers so much so that the captain rushed down the aft stairs and through the engine room door which had been left unbolted by the firemen.

"For God's sake, Jim!" he gasped. "You'll blow us sky high! She's shivering like a man with the ague and running like a scared jackrabbit! How much are you carrying?"

Hanway turned a haggard face upon the captain. "I'm a licensed engineer, ain't I?" he said. "This is the biggest race of my life, and I'll win if I don't blow us all to powder! Do you hear that?" Jim Hanway is running a 4,000-mile heat with the winter.

"But, Jim," pursued the captain, endeavoring to reason with the engineer, for river engineers in the old days were very often autocrats below decks, "how much steam—"

Hanway, who was again staring at the indicator, threw his hat over the gauge and grasping a stick of wood, turned upon the captain. His face had a nasty, malevolent look.

"Go to hell, will you?" he snarled. His eyes had narrowed into two steely points of light in the dark sunken sockets that told of tense nerves and sleepless nights.

The captain withdrew—and Hanway held the steam at fifty-six.

Morning crept in through the dirty little windows, and still Hanway stood with his hand on the lever and his haggard eyes fixed upon the gauge. When the second engineer came down to go on duty Hanway coolly knocked him through the door. After that the crew fought shy of the engine room.

"This is my first trip with the devil for engineer," explained the recently ejected, walking the deck and nursing a bruised jaw. "But he's sure making the Jennie dance!"

All day Hanway stood at his engine carefully scrutinizing every part and holding the steam up to the danger point. The boat tossed and groaned like a man with a fever. With an occasional snarled command he kept the weary firemen at work fetching wood from the decks and feeding the furnace. Ever and anon he asked for the reading of the thermometer. The mercury fell steadily.

Twenty-seven degrees—25 degrees—24 degrees—22 degrees.

His tireless pursuer was gaining upon him slowly, surely. But a strange exaltation seized upon Hanway. The rage of the born fighter mounted to his head like a strong liquor, and a sense of superhuman might ran through his muscles. In a dazed way he longed to meet his pitiless pursuer face to face and grapple with it. He would set his teeth in its neck! He would crush it with his arms! Then he laughed joyously at his strange conceit. His adversary was an omnipotent Nothing—an intangible, nerveless, fearless, pitiless Everything—an icy Abstraction, yet real as Death.

"Upon the slippery edge of the roof he stood balanced upon his toes like a ballet dancer."

And Hanway felt a transient thrill of joy at the thought that he alone defied this subtle, terrible Something—this gigantic Foe that fought like a coward.

In the evening a fireman, tottering under a load of wood, volunteered some information. "It's down to 10 degrees, sir, and the ice is running a bit!"

"You're a liar!" snarled Hanway, lunging at the man with a savage blow that sent him sprawling under his load.

"Would she stand 57 pounds?" muttered Hanway to himself. "the last reading was 22. We've lost 12—12 what? Twelve years—no, 12 miles—no, degrees."

By a curious mental process at which he himself wondered vaguely it seemed to him that zero was death. Why zero? He didn't know—but somehow, zero was death.

Turning to the firemen, he ordered one on deck to see how the mercury then stood. The man returned sneaking.

"How is it?" asked Hanway.

The bearer of ill tidings withdrew to a safe distance before he ventured to answer as one who confesses his guilt. "It's no better, sir—it's worse, sir—it's dropped to 9, sir."

Hanway seemed not to hear. His eyes were riveted upon the gauge. The indicator had just touched fifty-seven.

At midnight the pilot bawled frantically down the tube for less speed. Hanway stuffed a handful of waste into the tube. A minute later there came a grinding, slushing sound. Then the Lucas shook herself, shrieking and groaning through all her timbers, reared like a frightened horse and stopped stock-still.

Hanway was thrown to the floor. In a dazed mechanical way he scrambled to his feet again, shut down the engine and released the steam. Then, vaguely realizing that the race was lost and his adversary upon him, his legs gave way, and the light in his brain went out quickly like a snuffed candle.

When he awoke the dirty day was filtering through the grimy windows. he was alone in the engine room. He lay still for some time, blinking at the wan light. He could hear voices of command up on deck and the creaking of windlasses. For a moment it seemed to him that he was already dead and those were sounds above his grave. Then realization of the situation came upon him. The Lucas was on a bar and the crew was making ready to spar her off.

He staggered to his feet and with a mighty effort of his enfeebled muscles shoved wood into the furnace. Then he set the pumps to work. They would need steam, he thought—steam for the capstans. They would need steam. As for him—he had lost. He no longer felt any interest in the affair. He had fought a good fight and he had lost.

He tottered up the stairs and went on deck. Considerable ice was running. The bow of the Lucas was thrust far up onto a bar and the ice was already lodging about her. He went to the thermometer and found the mercury at 5 degrees below zero.

He grinned as it occurred to him that he had now been dead five degrees!

All night the crew heard the grinding and chugging of the ice about the Lucas. It was the forging of the chain. The fugitive had been captured, and the captor was fastening manacles upon the conquered. In the morning the river was jammed with ice from bank to bank.

For a week the crew scarcely stirred from the engine room, where they sat about sullenly. They were beaten, and they did not care to see the completeness of their defeat.

Four hundred miles lay between them and Fort Union, and below them, three hundred miles away, was Fort Sully.

With the beginning of the second week the temperature raised a fine, dry snow began to fall, and with it fell the awful winter hush.

Hanway went about as a man stunned. He ate mechanically and seldom spoke. His eyes has the dull, expressionless stare of a sick sheep.

The matter of food now became a problem, as the supply aboard was not sufficient to feed ten men more than six weeks; whereas five months lay between them and the spring break-up. Accordingly the captain proposed a big hunt, and five volunteered—four deck hands and the head pilot.

So when the snow ceased falling these five went forth. The five remaining men watched their companions dwindling into the great white silence till they disappeared over a ridge, and there was a muttering on the boat, for a strange dread had grown up out of the hush.

In the afternoon a gusty wind blew up from the northwest, sending long, snakelike steamers of snow writhing and hissing down the valley. Hour by hour the wind increased, and the remaining five peered anxiously into the steadily contracting circle of the horizon, but no hunters appeared. And the night crept in through the thickening snow haze scarcely perceived.

The five men sat huddled about the furnace in the engine room, listening for the voices of their returning companions. The wind howled down the smokestacks and shrieked through the supporting cables.

Late in the night the captain proposed a game of poker. All except Hanway sat in. But though they gambled their summer's wages recklessly, the gaming spirit was dead. Once, when a big jackpot had been opened, with all hands staying, a violent gust of wind beat at the door and howled hoarsely about the boat like the shouting of a desperate man. The second engineer dropped his cards face up, and, leaping to his feet, cried: "There! They're coming! They yelled!" Then he dropped into his seat and groaned.

And when the second pilot called an unusually stiff bet with a pair of trays the captain closed the game.

Morning came, a travesty of dawn. The day passed—a writhing, howling gray shadow. And the night came—a mere deepening of the twilight, felt rather than seen. On the evening of the third day the storm fell and the yellow sun went down smiling cynically upon the ghastly storm swept spaces. Then the white, pitiless night crept in with stars that were as bits of broken glass.

There were now only five men in the icebound Lucas—the captain, Hanway, the second engineer, the second pilot and a deck hand.

The temperature fell again after the storm, it reached twenty below zero, and the snow became crusted. In the long nights the dread-ridden crew heard the coyotes bewailing their empty bellies and the ache of their frosted feet. All night the cables drawn taut with the intense cold, sang dismally into the frozen hollow that was the world, and the contracting timbers popped and groaned.

One night in late December the captain dreamed a pleasant dream. It seemed to him that the winter had broken up, the spring rains fell, the good smell of the earth mixed with the odor of wet grass, filled his nostrils. He felt the lift of a flood beneath him. He heard the snoring of the engines, felt the eager trembling of the boat as she neared the flood and took the swirl of the current southward.

Then suddenly it seemed that the Jennie Lucas shook herself like a wet dog, and he awoke with the sound of splintering wood in his ears. The boat was vibrating. The machinery was moving.

He leaped out of his bunk and ran on deck, for he had not undressed. There was a light down the aft stairs. He rushed down into the engine room and found the boilers sizzling with heat and the machinery working under forty pounds pressure, which was steadily mounting, for the safety valve had been tied down.

He cut the cords that held the valve and shut down the engine. Then he looked about for Hanway, but he was not in the room.

"Where is that idiot?" muttered the captain; "he's busted the paddle wheels! I'll—"

He had reached the top of the stairs when a strange, wild, moaning cry, like and unlike that of a coyote, pierced the silent night like a pang. The sound seemed to come from the after deck. There the captain ran and beheld Jim Hanway on his hands and knees in the snow, with his haggard face lifted to the sky, sending forth doleful answers to the heart-broken plaint of the coyotes.

"What the deuce, Hanway—" began the captain.

Hanway raised himself to his knees, and turning his drawn face upon the captain pointed off down the white river and said with a weak expressionless voice: "I told you she'd have supper ready, didn't I, cap? Seems like I did—let's see. She's sitting up by the ice waiting—and I'm not coming home—because, cap, I can't get the throttle open somehow. Throttle's busted somehow—and she's waiting—been waiting—and supper's getting—getting—hush?"

Hanway passed a shaking hand across his brow and fell to sniveling like a frightened boy.

The captain put Hanway to bed and explained matters to the others who had turned out. "It's nothing but Jim—just a bit off his head—thought he was driving her south."

But the captain paced the deck till dawn, muttering to himself. He was haunted with a premonition that he would never see spring. He too felt a something big and black and terrible moving down upon him, as Hanway had put it. The awful stillness seemed pregnant with disaster.

The dawn crept like a shivering thing across the white expanses, and the sun lifted a pale face above the ghostly bluffs. Hanway slept heavily in his bunk and the captain did not appear. The three others fried the bacon for their breakfast and ate in silence. Then they set about in the engine room and waited. Waited for what? They did not know, but the monotonous winter hush seemed ever about to bring forth some unutterable horror. The perishing of their five companions in the blizzard and the madness of Hanway were having their effect.

Conversation seemed impossible. A question called forth only a laconic reply. Late in the afternoon the second pilot leaped to his feet and with clinched fists paced up and down the engine room.

"Why don't you talk?" he growled. "Why don't you talk? Hang you, why don't you sing or yell or talk?"

His two companions turned blank faces upon him for answer.

"You're all infernal lunatics that's what you are!" whined the second pilot, pacing the floor. "The devil's got it in for the Lucas! I tell you, you're a parcel of—"

Just then the great outer silence was broken by a wild song sung in raucous tones. The three leaped to their feet. Who had dared to shout so loud into that terrible stillness? It seemed like a challenge to some invincible sleeping enemy.

They rushed out on deck, and high above them on the curved roof of the pilot house they beheld the captain, looming huge against the sky. He was without coat and hat, and his hair fell in tangles about his bloated face. He was evidently very drunk.

Upon the slippery edge of the roof he stood, balanced upon his toes like a ballet dancer, looking down upon the astonished appearing audience. Then, bowing low, he raised a thick voice: "Entertainin' the (hic) coyotes! (hic). Good of me don'cha think?"

Then he suddenly began his song again and swung off into the dizzy mazes of a rowdy dance. He clogged, he shuffled, he pirouetted, he cha-ed. Keeping time with one giddy foot, he kicked high for the edification of an imaginary bald-headed row.

Louder and wilder grew the song, faster and faster he danced. Then, swinging too near the slippery edge of the roof, he went off in a whirling spray of snow, struck the hurricane deck and bounded off, landing at the feet of the three spectators.

He lay very still. A sluggish stream of blood oozed from his head and reddened the snow about him. The three gazed horror-stricken. This was the something that had been waiting about them in the silence.

For many minutes they stared upon the quiet face that seemed to them the visible center from which emanated the awful hush. At length they carried the body into the engine room, but the captain was dead.

In the evening they chopped a hole in the ice and thrust the body into it. There was no ceremony they wanted this quiet thing out of sight.

The next morning only two men appeared on the boat—Hanway and the deck hand. A fresh trail wound southward down the valley. The second engineer and the second pilot taking the last gun and the greater share of the grub, had fled in the night from the evil-starred Lucas.

Of the two who remained, one had lost his reason and the other kept continually drunk, for having despaired of following his deserting companions, since there were no more guns, he consoled himself with a keg of liquor which he had discovered in the captain's room.

The wolves grown bold with hunger, came close to the boat at night and filled the darkness with wailings. And through the day the two men stared vacantly down the white valley into the south. They seldom spoke to each other, for an unreasoning fear, an insane suspicion held them apart.

In the latter part of February a sudden change came over Hanway. He seemed as one who had been aroused from a long sleep. In a vague way he again realized the situation, and a longing to live and see the spring came upon him until it was an obsession. Now for the first time, he knew that the grub was running short, that there was only bacon left and not enough to feed two men until the spring thaw. But there was enough for one.

He would be that one!

The will to live grew big in his enfeebled brain and filled it full, until there was no place for pity. He got up in the night, seized the bacon, and the rifle and hid them in the engine room. All the next day he sat in the engine room with a stick of wood in his hand, feeding the priceless stuff which alone could enable him to see the spring.

And the deck hand [illegible] cursed and begged. He [illegible] but Hanway guarded his treasure. He would see the [illegible].

But in the midst of the third night the deck hand, grown [illegible], crept [illegible] when Hanway awoke from a [illegible].

"Great Cad, Hanway," [illegible] deck hand, "give me just a [illegible] chaw at, and I'll go away [illegible] Jim!"

Hanway laughed hideously [illegible] man's face. And then [illegible]. It was the battle of hunger and will, and Hanway was the larger. All the [illegible] wolves about the boat kept up their excellent hunger cry.

At length, Hanway tottered to his feet and fled into the engine room. He bolted the door with [illegible]. But the other lay quietly on the stairs.

Then there came a confusion of sounds as of a [illegible] falling in upon the boat. The wolves [illegible] fighting over the thing in the hallway.

But Hanway, shrieking with [illegible] piled log after log against the door. [illegible] would keep the devils out. He would see the spring!

In the middle of [illegible] from Sioux City, forcing its way up [illegible] stream that still ran ice. [illegible] of a boat. Both her paddle wheels were shattered, and she was [illegible] from stern to stem with the ice [illegible] swinging about with the swirl of the heavy spring current, she looked [illegible] like a floating corpse.

When the steamboat boarded her, they found the starboard [illegible] on deck. They went through the cabin and discovered no one. [illegible] battering at the door at the foot of the aft stairs, they entered the engine room.

In a corner of the room a [illegible] haired, gray-whiskered thing, not totally unlike a man, crouched and cowered with fear.

A WHITE BROADCLOTH TAILOR-MADE SUIT.

The fancy for very light costumes for afternoon wear has brought out many all white suits this winter, though as a rule women donning one of these white costumes for a round of calls travel in a carriage. The model would be equally smart in a darker color, for the lines are very good. The gored skirt is quite long and a deep tuck is run straight around just below the knee, giving a shaped flounce effect at the bottom. The coat is braided in a simple border effect with soutache braid and covered buttons of the cloth with long [illegible] loops add a rich touch.

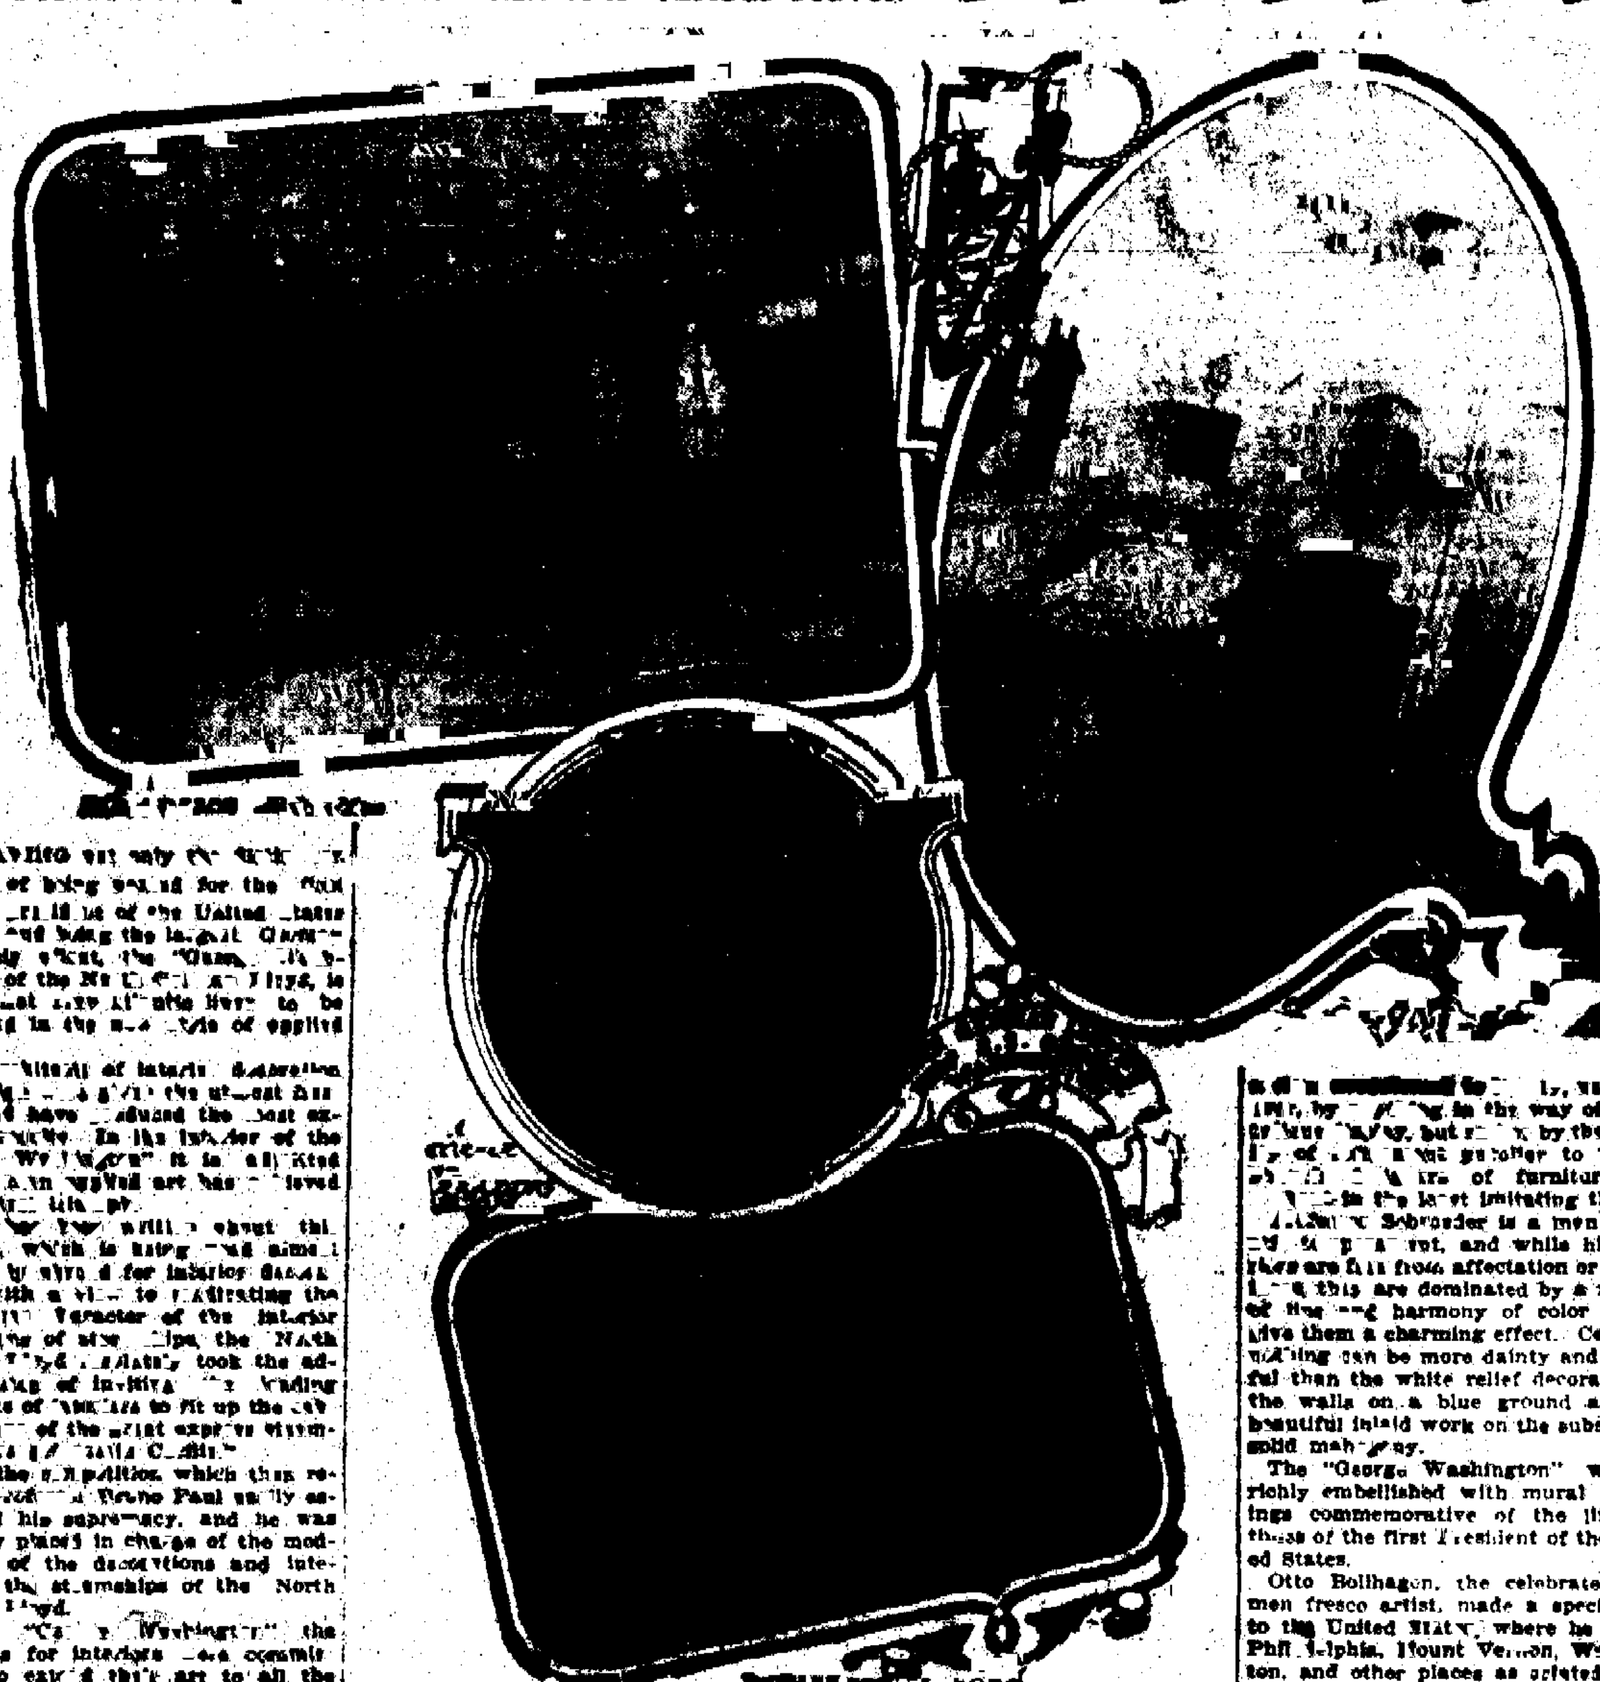

A NEGLIGEE OF EMBROIDERY FLOUNCING.

This charming room gown has the appearance of hailing straight from Paris, but elaborate as it seems the model should not be hard to copy, leaving out some of the intricate honeycombings of lace. To a broad embroidered flouncing is attached a deep drop of Valenciennes lace and allover tucked net. To this drop is fastened another drop of fine lawn ruffles trimmed with [illegible]. The surpliced waist of the flouncing is fastened to the skirt portion by [illegible] medallions and the fine tucks over the hip shape the [illegible] sleeves are huge frills of lace into which are [illegible]

NEW DECORATIVE ART FOR OCEAN STEAMSHIPS

Steamship "George Washington," Named in Honor of the First President of the United States, the Latest Addition to North German Lloyd's Fleet, Has Been Fitted Out in the Advanced Style Now so Popular Abroad for Interiors. Mahogany and Highly Polished Woods Among Chief Features. Imperial Suites, Acme of Luxurious Travel.

HAVING not only the distinction of being named for the first president of the United States and being the largest German [illegible] the "George Washington," of the North German Lloyd, is [illegible] to be [illegible] in the new style of applied [illegible].

The [illegible] of interior decoration [illegible] the utmost [illegible] and have [illegible] the most [illegible]. In the interior of the "George Washington" it is [illegible] that [illegible] applied art has [illegible] loved [illegible].

[illegible] about the [illegible] which is being [illegible] aimed [illegible] abroad for interior decoration [illegible] with a view to [illegible] the [illegible] character of the interior [illegible] of new ships, the North German Lloyd [illegible] took the advantage of inviting [illegible] leading [illegible] to fit up the [illegible] of the great express steamships [illegible].

From the competition which then resulted [illegible] Bruno Paul easily established his supremacy, and he was naturally placed in charge of the modelling of the decorations and interiors of the steamships of the North German Lloyd.

In the "George Washington" the architects for interiors were commissioned to extend their art to all the public rooms. The equipment of these offered the most difficult problem [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] by structural conditions and the [illegible] of perfect adaptation to its [illegible] with [illegible].

[illegible] more arduous conditions exist in the work on a steamship than in a hotel, apartment house or residence. On board a steamship the designer is provided [illegible] of iron columns and [illegible] which cannot be gotten rid of, odd corners, curved [illegible] and other disadvantages [illegible] the interior architect [illegible] it into a harmonious [illegible] in accordance with the fundamental [illegible].

Simple and Dignified Elegance.

The style of interior decoration and furnishing adopted recalls our own colonial type, the substantial, simple and dignified elegance of this period having displaced the more ostentatious glitter and glamor which has been such a noticeable feature of steamship decoration.

The roominess so characteristic of the Colonial, is typical of the great [illegible] bly rooms and cabins of the "George Washington." The leading architects for interiors in Germany have surpassed themselves in the perfection attained in the work of this new steamship. The adoption of this style to modern requirements has resulted in an exceedingly dainty and delicate combination.

Perfect in its beauty, the great reading room represents to a nicety the thoughtful creation of Professor Bruno Paul. It is located on the upper promenade deck, which is entirely given over to the public assembly rooms, except for a few cabins of the first class.

The reading room was on exhibition at the Munich exposition, and was most favorably commented upon. It is in subdued tones, without external ornamentation, giving an air of distinguished restfulness. By reason of its simplicity the idea of spaciousness is much enhanced. An ingenious arrangement of the furniture adds to the architectural effect. The bookcases are let into the walls between the permanently fixed writing tables, utilizing every nook and corner to the best advantage.

As an example of the resourcefulness of Professor Paul, his arrangement of the lounges in this room was the subject of unusual comment by those who visited the Munich exposition. In this room are a number of iron columns, necessary in the construction of the vessel, yet in his arrangement of lounges Professor Paul utilizes the columns in such a manner as to eliminate them as disturbing elements, and so as to add to the usefulness and beauty of the room.

The rooms of the first class on the "George Washington" are such as will instantly meet with favor from the traveling public. Their great size, aside from the unusually handsome decorations, insures this.

Imperial Suites Acme of Luxury.

For those who wish the very acme of luxury while traveling, are two imperial suites, as they are technically known. These consist of drawing room, breakfast or dining room, bedroom, fitted with brass beds and bath, together with all toilet accessories.

Next in point of elegance are the suites, of which there are two, each consisting of drawing room, bedroom and bath. On the promenade deck with the imperial suites and suites and suites are 24 cabines de luxe, of great size, with bath. There are seven other cabines de luxe with bath, but these are on the saloon deck, making in all 31 cabines de luxe with bath. These cabines de luxe have accommodations for three persons. Even with this number [illegible] who do [illegible] each passenger [illegible].

In the [illegible] of this character there are no upper berths, which arrangement, together with the richness and sumptuousness of the furnishings, great [illegible] and [illegible] square windows, gives the impression of an apartment ashore.

In addition to these rooms there are a number of large, handsomely fitted cabins in the first class for one, two and three persons.

The imperial suites on the "George Washington" were designed by Rudolf A. Schroeder, who has striven most successfully to meet the needs of [illegible] ly, yet [illegible] in the way of [illegible] by that quality [illegible] to the old [illegible] of furniture, but [illegible] imitating them.

The "George Washington" will be richly embellished with mural paintings commemorative of the life and times of the first President of the United States.

Otto Bollhagen, the celebrated Bremen fresco artist, made a special trip to the United States, where he visited Philadelphia, Mount Vernon, Washington, and other places associated with Washington's history, for the purpose of [illegible] data and local color.

Herr Bollhagen conferred with President Roosevelt, at the White House, and received from him valuable suggestions as to what constituted the decisive events in Washington's career.

JUDGING [illegible]

From the Kansas City Star.

There is a lot of folly talked on the servant question. Both sides indulge in recriminations, and no definite decision is reached as to where blame must be put. There are bad maids and equally bad mistresses, though to hear the latter talk they are terribly afflicted in their household help.

Intelligence offices with their ever-present conglomeration of employers and those to be employed, might lead to pessimistic ideas on the instability of domestic relations, were there not homes where no change has been made in servants for ten, twenty, thirty years.

Why do some women never lose a maid unless she marries or dies, while others' kitchens are kaleidoscopic in their changes? The secret lies more in the character of the mistress than that of the material with which she must deal.

There are certain qualities essential to the housekeeper whose servants stay with her. She must know good work and insist that it be done. But that insistence must never degenerate into fussy nagging. Domestic peace is ruined by never letting up. When the maid gets an idea that she cannot please, however hard she tries, she soon stops trying.

Standards of work must be invariable. To have one set of rules for company and another for family use is like attempting to run a railroad on a variable schedule; wrecks are not surprising.

She must be considerate of her maid's feelings, but not so considerate as to permit "soldiering" on her. Girls quickly learn when thoughtfulness of their comfort is kindly consideration or craven fear that they will leave.

The mistress who is sympathetic and firm is respected and obeyed; she who is vacillating in kindness is the one who has much to say on the ingratitude of maids. It is a maudlin sentiment that does no one good which permits girls to shirk work without cause.

It is well to give a maid a feeling of home. To let her feel so much at home that she runs things her own way and feels abused at suggestions makes for domestic unrest.

Sincerity is a high card in winning maids. The mistress who is a sham, who does not live up to her bargain, who promises with no intention of keeping it, she who says one thing to a maid and another about her, neither earns nor deserves constancy from her domestics.

The systematic mistress rarely makes changes in her household force. There is nothing harder than to work under "higgledy-piggledy" management. Never to know what is expected of one or for what one may be held responsible is trying to any girl who has a desire to give satisfaction.

She who keeps her maid long usually has a placid nature. Quick wrath has lost many a good servant. The superior catching powers of molasses to vinegar are never more marked than in the much discussed domestic relations.

The mistress who wants her maids to stay looks after their physical wellbeing. She sees to it that their sleeping quarters are not only comfortable but attractive; the kitchen is as convenient and airy as her means permit, and every possible labor-saving appliance is supplied. Above all, food is not stinted nor will any old cracked dish or torn cloth do for service in the kitchen.

A respect for leisure is a telling force in maid-keeping. Some women put a premium on slowness. If they get a swift maid, who can do her work quickly and well, they soon teach her to dawdle by inventing duties for a well-earned resting time.

If work be well done the clever mistress asks not how nor when it is done. Explain your ways to a maid, but also be willing to listen to her ways of doing things. If both seem of equal merit household peace is promoted by not being over insistent as to your own methods.

The long-headed mistress knows the difference between a friendly interest in her maid's life and prying into it. The girl who works in your household has as much right to lead her individual life, provided that it is well within decent rules, as has any other woman. The mistress who infringes on that right is often doing her own chores.

Owing to the necessity of handling their crops with rapidity, the more progressive farmers of the fruit belt in Michigan are adopting automobiles, and so many inquiries are coming into the manufacturers now for delivery cars that many of them have demonstration cars in the city and are making frequent demonstrations to farmers who will be in the market in the spring. The detachable tonneau car, the dealers declare, made to sell for from $1,200 to $1,600, seems to be the most in demand for this sort of use.

During the last 25 years I have cured thousands of sufferers, people who have tried every other known remedy, but found each one a complete failure. Then they heard of me—wrote for free advice as I am asking you to do, and were cured. Testimonials are my proofs. I will send you scores of such letters as the following:

Committee on Judiciary, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. Dear Sir: I regard Dr. Towns' cure of my brother and Congressman Dahle of Wisconsin, as wonderful. Neither had any relief until Dr. Towns treated them. Very truly, (Signed) John J. Jenkins.

Fell from Scaffold and Injured His Back

Thirty years ago James . Lee of 1100 9th St., S. E., Washington, D. C., fell from a scaffold and seriously injured his back. In telling about it he says: "My suffering was terrible; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I tried all kinds of plasters, belladonna, capcine and porous, without getting relief, and bought so-called electric belts, but none of them did me any good.

One day, while working near my daughter's house, my back pained me so badly that I had to quit. I went into the house and lay down for ease. My daughter had a bottle of Sloan's Liniment in the house and she rubbed my back well with it and gave me some to take home. I used six and a half bottles of Sloan's 25c Liniment and can do as much work now as any man in the shop, although I am sixty-seven years old. I would not be without Sloan's Liniment for any consideration and recommend it to anyone suffering pain."

A RESTAURANT COSTUME IN [illegible]

This pretty suit of light blue broadcloth has a smart cut coat on very simple lines, with a border trimming of satin to match and a narrow line of soutache braiding. The big buttons and loops on coat and sleeves are also of blue and the cord ornaments fastening the coat across the bust are dyed to match the pale blue shade of the cloth and satin. When the coat is removed a dressy little bodice is revealed; this bodice, of pale blue chiffon, being laid in broad tucks with surplice fronts crossing over the bust. In the opening between the fronts there is a V-shaped piece of silver lace. There is no collar, but a string of vivid coral beads lies around the throat just at the top of the bodice. The hat is a wide-brimmed affair of blue satin, trimmed with chiffon and wings. The marabout muff and neckpiece, in a soft mouse color, emphasize the delicate blue shade of the costume.

It does not contain the least particle of strong mineral ingredients, and is so prepared as to aid in the upbuilding of every portion of the system, while driving Contagious Blood Poison from the blood. No unpleasant effects ever follow the use of S. S. S., such as stomach troubles, dyspepsia, mercurial rheumatism, etc., as is so often the case where other medicines are used. S. S. S. goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and gently but surely drives out every trace of the disease, cleanses and purifies the circulation, and by its fine vegetable tonic effects, assists the system to rapidly overcome the ravages of the disease, and regain its natural healthful condition. S. S. S. does not cover up or hide the symptoms for awhile, to break out later, but so thoroughly does it remove the cause that no signs of the trouble ever return. S. S. S., Nature's cure, is the surest and safest remedy for Contagious Blood Poison. Home Treatment Book with valuable suggestions and information and any medical advice free to all who write.

The Louisiana Motor league has made application for admittance to the American Automobile association.

More than 600 farmers in central Kansas alone now own cars, with orders for spring delivery of 100 more.

The Denver Automobile club is planning an illuminated street parade for April, a gymkana for May and an "orphan's day" in June.

The council of administration of the athletic club of Belgium has decided to run the Circuit of Ardennes race in 1909.

Keep all oil or grease away from your tires. See that the garage floors are as clean as possible, and wipe off oil from tires as soon as seen.

Oddly enough the left hand control which has lately gained greatly in favor with taxicabs, was tried, condemned and abandoned some years ago.

A novel tire pump in which the exhaust from the motor is used instead of atmospheric air is claimed by the inventor to be able to inflate a tire in two and one-half minutes.

With the establishment of another motor car factory at Dayton, O., that city looms up for second place, after Detroit, as an automobile manufacturing city.

Twenty taxicabs are to be installed in Atlantic City, the famous New Jersey coast resort, by spring. A taxicab service is also being organized at Reading, Pa.

Promoters of the taxicab service being installed in San Francisco are confident that with moderate rates the service will prove as popular as in eastern cities.

From a paper thickness, when first used on bicycles, tire tubes have grown until those in excess of an eighth of an inch in thickness are more the rule on modern automobiles than the exception.

A new garage under construction at Los Angeles, at a cost of $10,000, will be the finest of its kind in southern California. Bakersfield, Cal., is also to have a handsome new garage costing $50,000.

Forty quarts of nitroglycerin, were recently carried 100 miles in an auto over a road none too good from Bolivar to Bristol, N. Y., and the man who did it, W. D. Tracy, an oil well shooter is alive to tell of the feat.

A cubic inch of oil will lubricate over a thousand square inches of surface, or replenish the supply on a square inch of motor bearing surface once for each revolution for a minute of time.

To straighten a bent pin, grip the splayed ends between a pair of pliers and rest the head upon some hard surface. A tap on the head of the pin spreads that end and closes up the other, straightening the pin and restoring it to its original shape.

One of the commonest reasons for oil lamps going out is the choking of the draught holes in the cap of the lamp by heavy deposits of carbon. These should be looked for and removed before any lengthy drive by night.

The monthly journal to be issued after February 1, by the American Automobile association will start off with a list of about 20,000 subscribers, composed of the membership of the A. A. A., comprised in its clubs and individual members.

The old stage in Yellowstone Park is being replaced by a modern air-cooled touring car and the stage line between Placerville and Lake Tahoe, made famous by Mark Twain's story of Horace Greeley, is to be brought up to date by the use of motor buses.

About the only way to remedy spring squeaks is to jack up the body of the car, separate the leaves of the plates of the springs, slightly with a screw driver and pour a copious dose of oil between each plate. Then push a little grease between each leaf with a thin-bladed knife.

When replacing a broken ball in a ball bearing it is better to renew the whole set, unless the new ball can be carefully gauged to be of the same size as the others. If this is not attended to, the new ball, having to bear more than its share of the weight, quickly succumbs.

A remarkable feature in connection with the earthquake in Italy is the planning of tours to points near the devastated regions. The bureau of tours of the Automobile club is being deluged with requests for information concerning the devastated [illegible] of the recent disaster.

A new [illegible] from [illegible] to [illegible], Cal., has [illegible] been [illegible]. It will be operated exclusively by gasoline motor cars. If the [illegible] connecting with the [illegible] Fe at [illegible] is [illegible] it will be only [illegible] to [illegible], where it will connect with Sierra railway.

There are now 19 dealers in Washington, D. C., who handle 41 different makes of cars, 34 of which are gasoline and seven electric. It is difficult to figure the amount of money invested for salesrooms, garages, etc., but it has been estimated at $2,[illegible].

Motorists of New Orleans are especially interested in the construction of a road 25 miles in length of "Chef Menteur." The road, as surveyed [illegible] the direction of the [illegible] will cost between $2,000 and $[illegible] per mile, and will be the [illegible] width of 21 feet.

It has taken 1,550 [illegible] cars to satisfy the demands of Denverites during the past year, and present indications are that the number will be more than doubled before 1909 ends. There are 240,000 people in the city, and it is estimated that they spent $2,[illegible] on motoring in 1908.

The rapid growth of automobiling in America is shown by the corresponding gains made by the Society of Automobile Engineers. From 136 at the end of 1907 the membership has jumped to nearly 300. The society's [illegible] for 1907 was [illegible] than $1,[illegible], while for 1908 it was nearly $[illegible].

Start your machine in a straight line if possible, and do not [illegible] around on your steering wheel before you get started. Not only the tires, but the steering mechanism as well, will suffer if this practice is continued. Do not run your [illegible] car along in the car tracks, as this grinds down one edge of the tire.

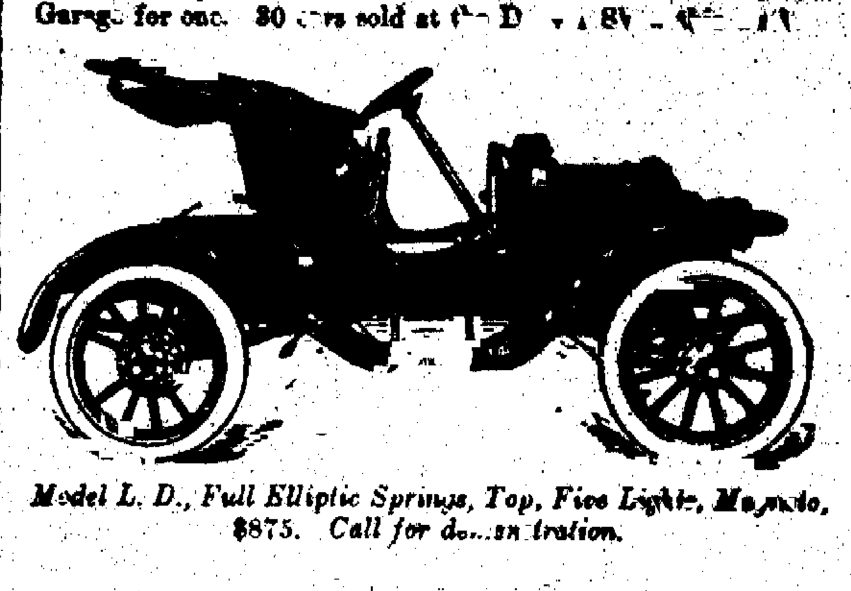

In touring choose the "softest" part of the road. Many prominent drivers always run with one side of their car on the edge of the road in the soft dirt. Avoid all obstacles and irregularities and cross car tracks preferably at a wide angle. A little judgment and care in following these rules may mean dollars in your pocket at the end of the year.

The West Virginia State Automobile association is urging motorists to support a bill in the state legislature [illegible] chief among them being a provision rendering it obligatory to [illegible] a tire chain or "other contrivance" when the roads are [illegible] requiring [illegible] drivers of [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible]

Country Club Annual Ball and "The Mascot" Chief Events in Society

THE annual ball of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club and the presentation of "The Mascot" formed a fitting climax preceding the Lenten season, beginning next Wednesday, and continuing until Easter Sunday, April 11. A winter notable for its social quietude will be followed by weeks even more pronounced in that direction. Those fond of gayety are anticipating, however, that during Easter all this may be forgotten in the merry whirl of social engagements.

Bridge has proven even more popular than ever this winter, and it is largely accountable for the absence of larger and more pretentious affairs. As cards are allowable during Lent there will be no cessation of the favorite fad so long as it does not conflict with churchly duties. Informal teas, too, are often heard of during Lent and this is a most satisfactory mode of entertaining one's friends.

Washington's birthday celebrations will be numerous, as it is a holiday revered alike by young and old. The patriotic organizations in particular will suitably observe the day and in social circles the day promises to be one to be recalled pleasurably.

The faculty and students have perfected plans for a picnic in the Garden of the Gods. A program of speeches and music is included and a box lunch will be provided by the college Y. W. C. A. Athletic sports, too, will take a prominent place, as no outing would be complete without them.

Country Club Ball

The club house at Broadmoor was opened with light last Thursday evening, when the annual ball of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club was given with even more elegance than usual. Parlors and Navajo rugs banked the broad fireplaces, which were surrounded into ideal lounging places for dancers by means of thickets of palms and tasteful plants, and furnished with tete-a-tetes and easy chairs. The ball room was festooned with asparagus and spruce boughs and the pillars were banked with potted and cut flowers mingled with palms and ferns. Within a bower of greenery, Fox's orchestra from Denver discoursed excellent music for the dancing, which began at 9 and continued till 2 o'clock. At that hour, a sumptuous buffet supper was served from a long round table set in the center of the dining room and handsomely decorated with roses and carnations.

Acceptances were received by the Board of the directors, Mrs. Duncan McArthur, Mrs. J. Arthur Connell, Mrs. Charles Gilpin, Mrs. Clarence Edsall, Mrs. William O'Brien and Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley. The committee having charge of the arrangements for the ball were Mr. Butler Williamson, Mr. Theodore C. Allen, Mr. Clarence Ludlam and Mr. William M. Randol.

Previous to the ball some of the society people participated in a subscription dinner, spread in the private dining rooms at the Antlers. Ferns and carnations formed the tasteful floral decorations. Included were Dr. and Mrs. William W. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Horace F. Lunt, Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, Miss Thornton, Miss Lucy Hayes, Miss Laura Anderson, Miss Margaret Anderson, Miss Frances Curtis, Miss Abbie Lansing, Miss Anna Eyre, Miss Elizabeth Lockwert, Mr. Samuel S. Pierce, Mr. John Carey, Mr. George Shields, Mr. Wilson Howbert, Mr. Dunbar Carpenter, Mr. Alfred Carpenter, Mr. Morris Davis, Mr. Lockwood, Mr. George Lockhart, Dr. J. F. McConnell and others.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Randol of Broadmoor entertained previous to the ball. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Douglas, Mrs. Farrington, Miss Eyre, Mr. Pissel and Mr. Horatio S. Brown of Denver.

Covers were laid for 12 for the dinner given at their Broadmoor residence by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilpin. Mrs. James T. Anderson, 1421 Wood avenue, also had dinner guests and they afterwards participated in the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Hill, Dr. W. A. Jayne and Mr. Walter Andrews of Denver were the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley at their residence in Broadmoor. Invited to meet them at dinner previous to the ball were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Every and Mr. and Mrs. Hennessey from France.

Admiral Evans' Lecture.

"In Command of the Atlantic Fleet From Hampton Roads to San Francisco" will be the subject of the lecture to be delivered by the celebrated Admiral Robley D. Evans on the evening of Saturday, March 6, in the Opera House. More than ordinary interest attaches to the engagement of Admiral Evans as he will fulfill no other in Colorado.

Governor John D. Shafroth of Denver has accepted an invitation to be present and introduce the speaker. If it can be arranged, the members of the El Paso club are desirous of holding a reception in honor of Admiral Evans at the mountain home of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club are equally anxious to have a testimonial banquet in his honor.

Already several of the social leaders have reserved boxes for the lecture. Among them are Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley, Mrs. B. P. Cheney and Mrs. James T. Anderson.

Admiral Evans will lecture with the hearty support of the Colonial Dames, The Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution and other patriotic organizations. Also this partial list of patrons and patronesses which will be increased later: President and Mrs. William F. Slocum, Judge and Mrs. Horace F. Lunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence P. Hodge, Mr. and Mrs. George Rex Buckman, Mr. and Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. C. Staley Gambrill, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, Mrs. James T. Anderson, Mrs. Nina Zeverley, Miss Sarah H. Dorsey, Hon. David N. Hewar, Mr. Arthur G. Sharp, M. Charles T. Iertig, Dr. B. P. Anderson, Mr. Horace K. Devereux, Mr. Henry C. Hall, Dr. William C. Sturgis, Mr. Henry L. B. Wills, Mr. W. H. Spurgeon, Mr. Frank H. Pettingell, Dr. Gerald B. Webb, Mr. William A. Otis, Mr. J. Arthur Connell, Mr. Robert W. Chisholm, Dr. Charles Fox Gardiner.

Colonial Dames

The Colorado Springs Colonial Dames held a meeting last Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Allen T. Gunnell, 1126 North Tejon street, the president, Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, in the chair. An interesting paper on "The Dress and Manners of Colonial Times" was read by Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg.

Arrangements were discussed for the annual meeting to be held in this city Wednesday, April 22, probably at the Antlers hotel. A committee consisting of Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg, Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mrs. William T. Gauss and Mrs. William K. Argo, was appointed to perfect the plans for the meeting.

"The Mascot."

Society was adequately represented upon each occasion last week, when most capable and finished performances of the favorite comic opera, "The Mascot" were given in the Opera House. Those who took part received due praise and ample appreciation of their efforts to please their friendly audiences.

As each singer so conscientiously filled the respective roles, it would be impossible to speak of them separately, nor is it needful, for scarcely anyone enjoying light opera failed to attend one or more of the presentations. The receipts will form the nucleus of a fund for the maintenance of "Camp Virgil," a place for summer outings for the deserving boys and girls of this city. The liberal support accorded to "The Mascot" is most gratifying to the Rev. Henry Rutgers Remsen, who has already made such a project possible by his own contributions.

Cliff Dwellings Association

A program meeting of the Colorado Cliff Dwellings association was held Wednesday afternoon with the regent general, Mrs. Gilbert McClurg at her home on North Cascade avenue. Mrs. William Wells Price who was the delegate of the association at the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Woman's clubs held last June in Boston, made a most interesting report.

Mrs. H. H. Seldomridge accompanied by Mrs. E. C. Sharer sang a song "Origin of the Rainbow" words by Mr. William H. Whitney and music by Laura Sedgewick Collins which was dedicated to Mrs. McClurg by the New York chapter, and "Like Stands My Lady" words by Mrs. McClurg music by Albert C. Pearson. Also by special request Mrs. Price's song "My Dream" with the composer at the piano. Mrs. Slocum presided at the coffee urn and Mrs. Jewett served the punch.

Among those present were Mrs. William F. Slocum, Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, Mrs. William W. Price, Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, Mrs. Edward C. Sharer, Mrs. Henry W. Hobson, Mrs. Eugene E. Griswold, Mrs. W. W. Williamson, Mrs. C. Staley Gambrill, Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mrs. Mary J. H. Ely, Mrs. Edward W. Kent, Mrs. Hart, Dr. Craighead, Miss Johnson, Miss Winifred Robinson, Miss Helen Hobson and others.

Dr. J. Walter Fewks, government ethnologist, gave an address on "The Excavations and Restorations in Mesa Verde Park" at the quarterly meeting of the New York chapter of the Colorado Cliff Dwellings association, which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York city recently. "Colorado," the composition of Mrs. W. W. Price of this city, was sung by a quartet, and patriotic airs made up the remainder of the musical program.

Colonial Tea.

A colonial tea will be given by Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, the regent, tomorrow afternoon at her residence, 808 North Cascade avenue, for the members of the Zebulon Pike chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and several guests. Visiting D. A. R. members, who may chance to be in the city, are also cordially invited to be present.

Mrs. Edward B. Field Jr., of Denver, representing the Colorado chapter of that city, will be the special guest of the chapter. She will read a paper entitled "Southern Homes."

It is requested that every member of the chapter wear a colonial costume so far as possible, or at least a black dress with white cap and kerchief. Several possess curious heirloom costumes, which they will don, thus adding interest to the patriotic occasion.

Handsomely Decorated

The members of the Colonial Dames in Colorado were invited to occupy boxes during the elaborate exercises held in the auditorium at Denver in commemoration of the Lincoln centenary last Friday evening. Those in attendance report that they were the recipients of congratulations on every hand because of the tasteful and striking decorations carried out in the colonial colors, buff and blue.

Valentine Costume Luncheon.

Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, 1003 Wood avenue, was the hostess last Friday of one of the handsomest and most original valentine parties ever given in this city. Mrs. Chisholm welcomed her guests in a striking "Queen of Hearts" costume, assisted by her sister, Mrs. William Vernet Ingham of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who wore a becoming colonial dress.

All present were in fancy costume, and the valentine idea was ingeniously carried out in every detail. When a messenger boy presented himself, bearing valentines for the hostesses from each one attending the luncheon, the scene was certainly a merry one. The afternoon was spent in playing bridge.

The pretty souvenir valentines were embellished with photographs of Mrs. Chisholm and Mrs. Ingham as they appeared in the costumes donned for the occasion.

In Honor of Mrs. Cheney.

In honor of Mrs. B. P. Cheney, Mrs. Francis W. Goddard handsomely entertained at luncheon last Wednesday noon at her home on North Cascade avenue. Pink predominated in the decorations and the flowers used were pink carnations.

In the party were Mrs. Goddard, Mrs. Cheney, Mrs. H. P. Farnsworth, Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, Mrs. Horace G. Lunt, Mrs. Leigh W. Chamberlin, Mrs. C. Mes Farnsworth, Mrs. Russell P. Anderson, Mrs. Charles Fox Gardiner, Mrs. Clarence Carpenter and Miss Holmes.

Benefit Concert.

"Ye Music of Ye Olden Time" will be heard at the concert to be given under the auspices of the Protestant Hospital guild March 3, 1909, in the Opera House. The patroness and patronesses will be: Mrs. G. S. Thomas, Rev. and Mrs. James B. Graham, Rev. and Mrs. H. Agnew Johnston, Rev. and Mrs. James H. Franklin, President and Mrs. William F. Slocum, Rev. Charles B. Wilcox, Miss Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Brigham, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence P. Dodge, Professor and Mrs. M. Clement Gile, Dean and Mrs. Edward S. Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. William Lennox, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Giddings, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cotten, Mrs. Jasper N. Beaty, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Pollen, Professor and Mrs. William K. Argo, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Perber, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Sawyer, Judge and Mrs. W. S. Morris, Mrs. John Lennox.

Informal Bridge.

The Misses Sylvia and Ruth Brigham informally entertained five tables at bridge last Wednesday afternoon in their home, 1220 North Nevada avenue.

Afternoon Tea.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Horace Gray Lunt and her daughters, Mrs. Meredith Bailey, Jr., and Mrs. Horace Fletcher Lunt, were the hostesses at a charming afternoon tea at the Lunt residence on North Cascade avenue. The numerous guests were both ladies and gentlemen.

Entertained at Dinner

Miss May Kyle invited a few ladies whose husbands were attending the meeting of the Winter Night club, to be her dinner guests last Monday evening at her home on Wood avenue.

Card Parties

Three tables were required for the guests of Mrs. A. C. Magruder, who were invited to play bridge last Thursday afternoon at her home 1231 North Nevada avenue. The prizes for each table consisted of handy bridge sets, and they were awarded to Mrs. Chisholm, Mrs. Scully and Mrs. Shearer. In the evening Dr. and Mrs. Magruder entertained a small party of friends informally at bridge.

Luncheon at the Antlers.

Mrs. P. T. Hanscom, 1427 North Cascade avenue has issued invitations for a luncheon to be given at the Antlers next Tuesday.

Miss Eyre's Card Party.

The informal bridge of Miss Eyre, 1922 North Cascade avenue, on Tuesday afternoon was participated in by Mrs. Charles W. Davis, Mrs. Edward A. Rosenfelt, Miss Laura Anderson, Miss Lucy Hayes, Miss Frances Curtis, Miss Thornton, Miss Kissel, Miss Lansing, Miss Lockhart, Miss Gotham, of Philadelphia, and the Misses Eyre. A few other friends dropped in towards 5 o'clock for a chat and a cup of tea.

College Tea.

The young women of the Contemporary society of Colorado college gave a most delightful valentine dance Saturday evening in McGregor gymnasium in compliment to the members of the Minerva and Hypatia societies.

The ladies invited to act as patronesses were Mrs. Leslie J. Skelton, Mrs. Florian Cajori, Mrs. Henry B. Hayden, Mrs. M. Clement Gile and Mrs. Edward S. Tucker. More than 100 were in attendance. The decorations were typical of the valentine season.

Fraternity Dinner.

Some of the seniors and juniors of the Kappa Sigma fraternity gave a delightful dinner at the fraternity house, 930 North Weber street, Wednesday evening. CONTENT-DISCONTENT.

Some murmur when their sky is clear
And wholly bright to view,
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue
And some with thankful love are filled,
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God's good mercy gild
The darkness of their night.

In palaces are hearts that ask,
In discontent and pride,
Why life is such a weary task,
And all good things denied.
And hearts in poorest huts admire
How love has in their aid
Love that never seems to tire—
Such rich provision made."

THE WEARY SHOPPER'S RIDE.

(With Apologies to the Hon. Mrs. Norton)
The shopper stood in the subway car,
(Step lively!)
Hung to the strap through the crash and jar,
Bitterly cursing her natal star
(Oh, walk as though you were flying!)
Bundles she carried, a peddler's pack
Clumsy passengers walked up her back,
A modern martyr, bound to the rack,
Each nerve in her frame was crying.

The voice of the guard thro' the darkness [illegible]
(Step lively!)
Her senses reeled with the noise and roar,
While ever his tones one burden bore,
(Oh, walk as though you were flying!)
Ghostly fingers, with touches fine,
Played devils' jigs up and down her spine,
Do, re, mi, [illegible] each bump in the line,
One ache with the other dying.

[illegible] and her [illegible] a window [illegible]

"Travel with me! you have naught to [illegible]
Your [illegible] is finished [illegible]
(Oh, walk as though you were flying!)
Fainting, she sank ere the close of her [illegible]

"Of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
To the [illegible] above [illegible] dying."

Lo! [illegible] called [illegible] his chair of state,
The [illegible] had heard so [illegible]
(Oh, walk as though you were flying!)
[illegible] she turned, "Nay, I will not [illegible]

THE SECRET OF DEATH.

"She is dead!" they said to him. "Come away!
Kiss her and leave her; thy love is clay."
They smoothed her tresses of dark-brown hair—
On her forehead of stone they laid it fair;
Over her eyes, that gazed too much,
They drew the lids with a gentle touch;
With a tender touch they closed up well
The sweet thin lips that had secrets to tell;
About her brows and beautiful face
They tied her veil and her marriage lace,
And drew on her white feet her white silk shoes
Which were the whitest no eye could choose;
And over her bosom they crossed her hands.
"Come away!" they said. "God understands."
And there was a silence and nothing there
But silence, and scents and eglantere,
And jasmine, and rose, and rosemary;
And they said: "As a lady should lie, lies she."
And they held their breath as they left the room,
With a shudder to glance at its stillness and gloom,
But he who loved her too well to dread
The sweet, the stately, the beautiful dead,
He lit his lamp and took the key
And turned it—alone again, he and she.
He and she, but she would not speak,
Though he kissed in the old place the quiet cheek.
He and she; but she would not smile,
Though he called her the name she loved erewhile
He and she, but she would not smile,
To any one passionate whisper of love.
Then he said: "Cold lips and breast without breath,
Is there no voice, no language of death—
Dumb to the ear and still to the sense,
But to heart and to soul distinct, intense?
See now! I will listen with soul, not ear;
What was the secret of dying, dear?
Was it the infinite wonder of all
That you could ever let life's flower fall?
Or was it a greater marvel to feel
The perfect calm o'er the agony steal?
Was it miracle greater to find how deep
Beyond all dreams sank downward that sleep?
Did life roll back its records, dear,
And show, as they say it does, past things clear?
And was it the inner [illegible] of the [illegible]
To find out so what a [illegible] love is?
There must be a [illegible] [illegible]

Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

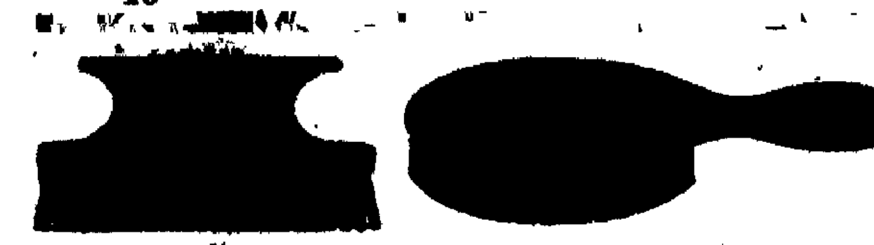

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Minneapolis, Minn.:—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women, I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. Within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefits to be derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. John G. Moldan, 2115 Second St. North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

From the beginning have taken a keen interest in the work and progress of the Van Briggle Pottery. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the pottery at the present is turning out finer pottery than ever before. In design, coloring, quality of glaze and finish, the recent pieces are much superior to the early work. The pieces in our stock are carefully selected for the beauty of color and perfection of shape and glaze. From seventy-five cents upward our selection is complete.

The garments we show are from the foremost makers of ladies' and misses' suits. Not expensive but excellently made suits at a very moderate price.

At $15, $20, $22.50, $25, $27.50, $30, $35, and on up to $50. Really you will be surprised at the beautiful suits we are showing at these popular prices. Of course we're going to show tailored suits on up to a hundred dollars, but the range of suits priced from $15 to $50 will comprise the greatest lot of garments ever shown in the city.

It is the advanced showing of these jaunty tailored garments that we will have ready for Tuesday. No store can sell you $30, $35 and $40 suits for $25 at the beginning of the season. This store could not pay expenses and sell goods at actual cost. We do claim to show you the best suits at $20, $25, $30, $35 and up, that you have ever bought for the money. The suits are perfect in workmanship, correct in style, cleverly made; in fact you will be perfectly delighted with them. They are distinctively Giddings tailored suits, and there's no store in New York city that can show you better values. Your intelligent and unbiased judgment will prove that point to you. Come to see the new things, even if you are not ready, for you'll want to know the best place to buy when you are prepared.

See the New Millinery, Fancy Dresses, Jackets, etc., for Spring

The future success of this store depends upon its ability and determination to serve you right and honestly. We're growing fast, every year the demand for the Giddings qualities are getting greater. We promised you the best millinery and ready-to-wear section in the city. Come to our store day by day from now on and see how well we have kept our promise.

The Lesson Mr. Fox Learned

By CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS

"THE trouble with Bill," said the Shanty Kid, "is, he wants to make out he knows everything just because he's the guide. Maybe he does know everything about the grown-up wild animals. But when I ask him about what they do when they're just kids, like me—then he makes up. I know by the way he looks."

"That's right!" responded Uncle Andy. "Don't you let Bill fool you too much! But as for these stories I'm going to tell, remember every one of them might be true, and some of them are."

The waters of the lonely forest lake, which they were coming to, were still as glass in the sunlight. On a log running out into the water sat a huge porcupine which, at sight of the two strangers, began to bristle with indignation.

"I don't like him!" said the Shanty Kid. "Do you suppose he was like that when he was little?"

"Well," replied Uncle Andy, seating himself on the end of the log, "sit down here, and I'll tell you about one of his great-grandchildren, who went out walking all by himself one day and fell in with a spry young fox."

"What was his name?" inquired the Shanty Kid, much interested.

"Let's call him Little Quills," said Uncle Andy. "And as for the young fox, his name was Red Brush.

"It was most natural that the mother porcupine should wean her prickly family very young. This was not difficult, as their great, sharp teeth, like chisels, developed very early. Everything, almost, in the way of green twigs and bark and wood tasted good to them. So while they were still little more than babies their mother led them in among the sweet-smelling shadows and patchy sunlight of the forest and—suddenly slipped away by herself!

"The rest of the youngsters at once climbed into trees, where instinct told them they could have food, lodging, and safety all together. But Little Quills, being of a more independent disposition, started right off by himself to see the strange, whispering, shadowy world.

"He was a squat, sturdy little figure, with blunt, chopped-off-looking nose. His tail was short, but thick and strong, and covered with keen quills like the rest of his body.

"At last he came out from the gloomy forest into the sunshine of a wide clearing. Little Quills was dazzled at first by the glare, and shrank back, but curiosity soon led him forward again. He had caught sight of an empty wooden box which had once contained salt codfish. Little Quills went up to it bravely, took one sniff at it and decided it was good to eat.

"Never before had Little Quills tasted anything quite so good. Because the box was dry and hollow his gnawing made a great noise on the sharp [illegible] air. And the noise attracted the attention of a [illegible], bright-eyed, red-furred creature with a long, bushy red tail, away over at the other side of the clearing."

"That's Red Brush!" exclaimed the Shanty Kid.

"Of course," said Uncle Andy. "Well, Red Brush didn't know what to make of that [illegible] noise. Silently as a shadow he set out across the clearing. At [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible], he caught sight of Little Quills. Now Red Brush had never seen a porcupine before. To his [illegible] Little Quills was a harmless-looking creature, considerably smaller than himself. His first impulse was to sneak up and grab him at once. He stole nearer and nearer till he was quite near enough to jump. But instead of jumping, he sat up on his haunches just behind Little Quills and tried to make up his mind.

"As Little Quills kept happily gnawing on the fish-box he kept turning his head this way and that, till all of a sudden, out of the corner of his eye, he caught a glimpse of Red Brush sitting there so close behind him. At once all his quills began to rise, though he was quite too busy to stop gnawing. But Red Brush was terribly surprised. The little dark-brown creature had suddenly grown as big as himself. He tip-toed daintily all about the bristling bunch of quills, which seemed to have no convenient place to bite at until he caught sight of that tail.

"Stretching out his nose to sniff at it, he all at once found out more than he wanted to. Quick as lightning that stiff tail struck sidewise, very savagely. It caught Red Brush a heavy blow right on the side of the nose. And instantly his muzzle was so full of quills it looked as if he had black-and-white whiskers.

"With a shrill yelp of pain and astonishment Red Brush threw himself clean over backwards, and fell to pawing wildly at those fiery torments in his nose. Failing to get rid of them, he raced madly across the clearing and disappeared in the woods.

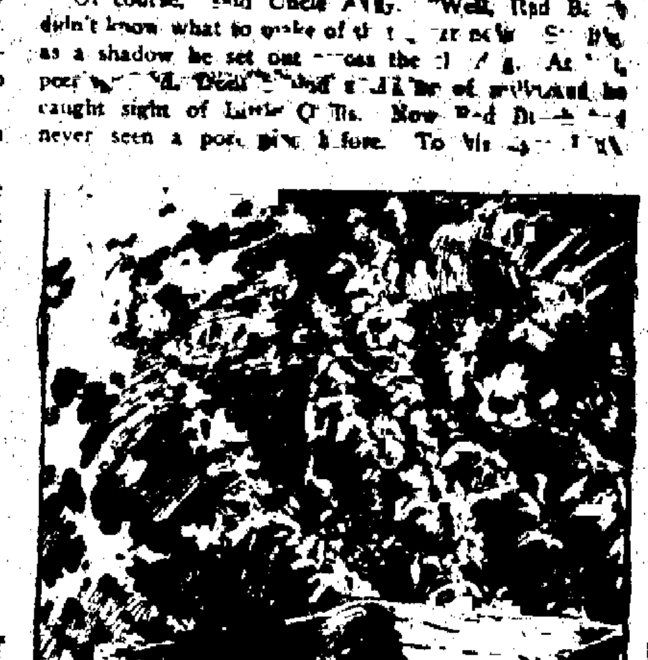

"In a minute or two Little Quills lifted his head, smoothed down his bristles, and went on gnawing at the fish-box. When he had eaten quite all he could hold he climbed the nearest tree, hoisted himself up in a comfortable crotch, and let himself be rocked to sleep."

"But what became of Red Brush?" asked the Shanty Kid, anxiously.

"Oh, now, let me tell you!" replied Uncle Andy. "He had sense, that young fox. He put his nose down close to the ground and planted his forepaws solidly on the quills. He managed to tear most of them out—though you may think for yourself how it hurt! The rest he broke off short. Then he went away and hid in a dark place by the brook for days, and didn't eat a thing—only drank a lot of water. His nose swelled up and burned and ached until he would have to stick it in the cool, wet mud. After a while the ends of the quills worked their way out and the swelling went down and he got perfectly well. And ever after that he was a very wise fox and always looked politely the other way when he saw a porcupine."

ALL AT ONCE HIS QUILLS BEGAN TO RISE.

Sam and Joe, and Tom and Will

By ETHEL M. KELLEY

On Sabbath morning there are rows
All up and down the street,
Of people in their Sunday clothes,
All orderly and neat.
The world is very sweet and still,
And no one makes a noise,
For Sam and Joe, and Tom and Will,
Are Sunday little boys.

Their hair is parted very straight,
Their faces shiny clean!
They have a very steady gait
A [illegible]
They hold their chins up stern and stiff,
And [illegible] their [illegible];
The [illegible] boys all [illegible] as if
They [illegible]

Their hats are even on the head,
Their hands are by the side;
Their pockets spare and thin, instead
Of bulging full and wide.
There has been given every one
A hanky square and white,
To wipe his Sunday face upon,
When Sunday skies are bright.

They do not whistle, do not play,
They do not sing or shout,
But manfully upon their way
Go trudging strong and stout.
Oh! All the world is still [illegible],
And no one makes a noise,
When all the boys [illegible]
Are Sunday little boys.

WHEN RED RIDING-HOOD MARRIED THE KING

By GRACE MACGOWAN COOKE.

WHEN the wicked wolf had eaten up Red Riding-Hood's grandmother, the little girl's father came in with the woodchoppers and killed the savage brute. The first thing everybody asked Red Riding-Hood when she began to tell her strange story was, "How could you understand what the wolf said to you?" And the little girl realized then, for the first time, that she could understand the speech of birds and beasts. She was an only child and had played alone in the woodland near her father's cottage all her life, and she had been able to understand what the little people of the woods said to her, but had never before realized that in this she was different from other people.

Matters went well and happily for the little girl till she was almost grown to be a woman. Then her dear mother died, and her father married and brought home to the cottage a cruel stepmother, who hated Red Riding-Hood from the moment she crossed the threshold of her new home.

Red Riding-Hood, made very unhappy at home, went more and more to the woods, and spent her time with her furred and feathered friends in the grove. One day she met there a very old wolf, so old that her hair was white, and she was beginning to be blind. "I have, for a long time, desired to see you," the wolf said to her. "I am the mate of that wicked wolf who once attempted to eat you, and I have never ceased to grieve over it. Will you trust me, and let me be your very good friend?"

Red Riding-Hood had a kind, confiding heart. Being good herself, she looked for no evil in others, and she trusted the half-blind old wolf at once, and went to her den, which she found to be a clean cave in [illegible] rocks. There the poor child [illegible] [illegible] when her cruel stepmother would [illegible] the door with hard words.

About this time Red Riding-Hood's father went upon a journey, and the young girl heard her stepmother planning, with a wicked man, to have her killed and put out of the way before he should return. Very much frightened, she stole away to her friend, the wolf, and begged that she might lie hidden in the den. The old wolf, who was growing blinder every day, was very glad to have Red Riding-Hood with her, and the child lived there till she was grown to be a young woman.

Then one day the King's son came into the wood with a [illegible] of huntsmen. There was never another for beauty and for courage as this young [illegible] [illegible] The brutal [illegible] a deer which took refuge in the [illegible] Red Riding-Hood, who knew all the [illegible] in [illegible], just as you know your [illegible] to the [illegible] of the den to beg the [illegible] the young [illegible] all [illegible] the [illegible] he had ever [illegible] his milk-white [illegible] and begged her to [illegible] him.

Red Riding-Hood [illegible] so [illegible] surprised that she scarcely knew what to say; she told him, however, that Mother Wolf was old and blind, and she could not leave her.

The Prince was so enchanted with Red Riding-Hood's beauty and sweetness that he did not observe [illegible] and never guessed for an instant that the "Mother Wolf," of whom she spoke, was an animal and not a person. He promised to come back and [illegible] her kind of Mother Wolf. He assured her that his father, the King, would [illegible] for her.

On the evening of this same day the girl's stepmother, having heard by some means that Red Riding-Hood was still living and in the woods, gathered her neighbors together and persuaded them that the young girl was a witch who ought to be drowned.

Red Riding-Hood's father was now dead, and there was no one to speak for her. The stepmother reminded these silly, ignorant, foolish folk how often they had [illegible] Red Riding-Hood converse with birds and beasts, and [illegible] surely [illegible] was no one but a sorceress who could do that. She declared that if they let this witch [illegible] evil upon them and their cattle, that the children would be deformed; the cattle would die in the stalls and they themselves suffer terrible sickness.

In their terror of all these things they gathered sticks and stones and hoes and pitchforks, and went out shouting to seek the witch. When poor Red Riding-Hood saw and heard this noisy rabble coming up to the den, she was very much terrified. She had not seen any human being save the Prince and his train for more than a year. She was dressed in skins, which the animals had brought her and which she had fashioned into a robe.

She stood up in the doorway of the den and looked down at the yelling people. Mother Wolf stood there, too, and though she could not see them, she heard them, and her big, white teeth were bare, and she was snarling in a [illegible].

"Tell them that you will call every fierce wild animal in the wood," she counseled. "Do not let them touch you, little [illegible]. [illegible] They will tear you to pieces down there."

"What is it you would have of me?" Red Riding-Hood called down.

"You are a witch, a witch, a witch!" the people shouted back to her. "Come down and let us throw you into the river. If you sink, then we shall know that you are not a witch."

"If you sink, then you will be drowned!" mumbled Mother Wolf; "there is nothing so foolish as people. If you float they will burn you for a witch, and if you sink and drown, you will be just as dead as if you were burned. Stay with me, little [illegible], and call the wild animals to help you."

But Red Riding-Hood had looked into the faces of her kind; she knew that these people were only foolish and stirred up to evil beliefs by her wicked stepmother.

"I will go with you to [illegible]," she said. "I will be tried in the courts, but not one of you must touch me. I will go without that."

She made ready to go and bade Mother Wolf good-by. "No one of them dares touch you," Mother Wolf cried joyfully, "for see, here come the cats, who are afraid of nothing; they will go with you and walk on each side."

Two great, tawny panthers bounded into the back of the den, and when they stepped [illegible] on each side of the young girl, you may be sure that the people fell back very quickly and nobody wished to touch her or do her harm.

So it was that Red Riding-Hood came to the great stone prison and was locked in. That was a very serious time for the regions about. All the birds, when they heard of it, refused to sing. The wolves howled all night, although there was no moon, and the sound of this fearful din in the dark made the cattle uneasy in their stalls. The people were convinced more than ever that she was a witch—and a very powerful one.

Matters were in this state when the old King died, and the young King, being crowned, was advised by his ministers to take a wife. He refused very sadly to do so, for he was that same Prince who was so charmed with Red Riding-Hood's beauty and who, coming back to the den, found no maiden there to greet him, only a very old, gray wolf, so old that its hair was white, lying dead across the entrance.

They brought in the soothsayer to talk to the King and he told the latter that he would never be a happy man till he was wedded to a Queen who understood the language of beasts and birds. And the King, feeling very sad, now that he had lost the one whom he loved, sent heralds to search for a maiden who understood the language of beasts and birds.

The herald came to the town in which Red Riding-Hood was imprisoned, on the day of her trial. When she stood up to answer to the charges against her, the Judge himself did not believe her guilty, and all agreed that she was not only the most beautiful maiden they had ever seen, but the sweetest.

However, those who had brought the charge against her must needs have someone to speak for them, so her stepmother took the stand, and related how Red Riding-Hood had, since she was a child, been able to converse with all beasts and birds, concluding her remarks with: "I am sure that no one but a wicked witch could do the things which she has done. Why, we all did see her come to this prison with two panthers walking beside her—surely no one but a witch, and a very wicked one, could accomplish this!"

When the Judge had heard all that could be said on both sides, he decided that no cruel action could be brought against the prisoner, and sent for the King's herald and bade him to tell the King that what he sought had been found.

It was expected that the King's chamberlain would come to conduct Red Riding-Hood to his royal master; but it was the King himself who rode in haste up to the prison gates.

Red Riding-Hood had been sent to the Judge's own home; there his Lordship's daughters had taken pleasure in dressing one whom they supposed would be their future Queen, in such apparel as seemed suited to her. When the King arrived and found that this maiden was, indeed, the one he had never ceased to love, he was overjoyed. A great feast was made, and the marriage took place at once.

The young Queen was mounted upon a snow-white palfrey, and together they set out to ride to the Palace. And then occurred a wonderful and beautiful thing. Mind you, all the birds had been silent during this time, for the news had not yet reached them; but as Red Riding-Hood, whom we must now call Queen Red Riding-Hood, and her train left the castle gates, a little wee bird in a sober gray coat, determined to be first to tell the news, flew ahead of her crying in bird language, "Queen Red Riding-Hood is coming! Sing your sweetest songs!"

As the wedding procession wound through the groves the songsters burst into such melody that the musicians who rode with them hushed their instruments and listened.

Queen Red Riding-Hood made the best Queen that ever sat on a throne, for she was Queen not only of the people, but of all the beasts and birds in her realm—who, if you come to think of it, really ought to have a Queen who understands their language [illegible]

THE NEW PANAMA AND PROGRESS AT CULEBRA CUT

THE illustrations shown herewith are from the most recent photographs taken of Panama and its park, Culebra cut, Rio Grande slide and the country adjacent. The scene of the street in Panama shows what it is at the present time. Since the dirt began to fly in the canal zone somnolent conditions have changed and the city on the sands has already become known as the New Panama.

President Elect Taft has completed his hurried inspection of the work. The engineers, who accompanied him have been over the route and will make their report at an early day. The country will then know whether the great water course that is to connect the two oceans will be on the sea level plan or by lock. The latter is the one on which the work has been done up to date. The result of President Elect Taft's visit may change this to the former plan.

The engineers who went with Mr. Taft will pass upon the work of the army engineers, who have been under the instruction of the chief engineer, Colonel Goethals. The conflicting reports as to the condition of the Gatun dam's foundation will be settled by the investigation of the engineers who went to the isthmus with the president elect.

During his visit Mr. Taft has had frequent conferences with Colonel Goethals and his assistants on the [illegible] ultimate cost of the work. It is not pre[illegible]d that the cost, whether the [illegible] is changed or not, will be [illegible] for years [illegible] by several mil[illegible]

The country was informed by Colonel Goethals over a year ago that the United States would pay out more [illegible] than the [illegible] projectors of the [illegible] thought it would be necessary to pay.

There is an idea that the vast total of the enterprise will be over $300,000,000, but this is not [illegible]. After he had made his first estimate Colonel Goethals said he hoped the project would not exceed $250,000,000, but he [illegible] he was unable to state that that amount would be the limit. On the contrary, he said that at least $50,000,000 or perhaps $60,000,000 would be added to his estimate.

One fact has been demonstrated. The engineers have worked with such rapidity that they kept ahead of the appropriations, and the dirt is flying as fast today as when they took charge of operations. And fast digging calls for quick and ready money. Colonel Goethals was told a year ago by the president to keep things moving at the [illegible] labor rate and to incur a deficiency if necessary. Being a good soldier, Colonel Goethals obeyed the orders of his superior to the letter. Congress was called upon to provide the money in an urgent deficiency bill.

The vital points in the construction of the lock canal have been the Gatun and La Boca dams. Both have received the closest scrutiny by the visiting engineers.

As so much had been said respecting the Gatun dam, more time was devoted to an inspection of conditions there than at any other one point. It appears that the engineers have agreed that whatever has taken place at this point has been without importance, at least so far as reported landslides are concerned. Emplacements of the dam's foundations were closely inspected, and conditions in this respect were found to be satisfactory.

The last days of the visit of the Taft party were crowded. A number of official functions occurred, but the visit was strictly one for business. While many of the reports in connection with the visit are more or less conjectural and must remain so until the engineers make their official report, it seems to agree that this visit has added great impetus to the entire work. The universal interest in the stupendous project will undoubtedly spur the visiting engineers to make the result of their work known at the earliest possible moment.

During the visit of the Taft party [illegible] the Newport, an [illegible] passed through La Boca channel on the Pacific side. She is the first vessel to go through this new channel. It was the plan of the authorities that the first vessel to pass through La Boca channel should fly the American flag. A few days later Mr. Taft and his engineers who went with him to the canal zone made an inspection of the Gatun dam.

The following resume of conditions, etc., on the isthmus is pertinent:

"The isthmus of Panama is nothing more or less than a neck of land connecting the continents of North and South America. Actually it has no regular limits or boundaries, for I have never heard of any man who could tell where it begins or where it ends or ever seen any geographical work which defines its limitations. The isthmus is contained wholly within the republic of Panama, which extends from Colombia to Costa Rica, a distance of about 400 miles. The present republic was formerly a department or state of Colombia and, of course, is the northernmost country in South America, although it is frequently confused with the Central American states lying farther to the north. As a matter of fact, the republic of Panama contains, in addition, still another isthmus, that of Darien, on the Colombian frontier, so that it can readily be seen that the isthmus of Panama does not include the entire country, as is generally supposed.

Between the cities of Colon and Panama the United States has leased a strip of land forever. It is forty-seven miles long and ten miles wide, extending five miles on each side of the proposed canal. Although Panama and Colon are included within the limits of this strip, called the canal zone, they are not under the government or jurisdiction of the zone, and the Americans have nothing to say in regard to their internal affairs, except one thing, and that is sanitation. Under the treaty between the republics of the United States and Panama the Americans have the right to enforce all sanitary measures in the two cities of Panama and Colon. They also have the right in conjunction therewith to maintain a rigid quarantine service, and as long as the present system of quarantine is maintained there will never be any yellow fever in these two ports or in the canal zone. The writer hopes that these few lines will disabuse the minds of many of the misty ideas now current in regard to the geographical and political status of the zone, the isthmus and the republic.

In addition to overlooking the canal the recent congressional committee sought to ascertain facts in regard to the government, the courts and the police system of the zone. Although as before stated, the committee is not saying anything, it is currently believed that a report will be presented to congress recommending a change in the present form of government and also in the courts which at present administer law in the zone. It is not thought that any great change will be made in the police department.

It is not known precisely just how the present mode of government will be changed, but it will probably be done by divorcing the governments functions from the isthmian canal commission as at present maintained and making that branch entirely independent. At this time, although there is a governor of the canal zone and although he is a member of the commission, he can do very little without the aid or consent of the other members of the commission, most of whom are army engineers. In fact, with nearly every dispute that arises which is not an issue for the courts it is customary for the contending parties to carry the question to Colonel Goethals.

WASHINGTON AS SEEN BY NOTED ARTISTS

GILBERT STUART, whose name is more frequently mentioned in connection with the portraits of Washington than any other artist's, was born in Rhode Island in 1775. It is not known definitely how many portraits of Washington he painted. At least sixty-one are authentic. The number copied by other artists and claimed by the owners to be original is large. Once it is known that a Washington portrait is a Stuart it is regarded as a rare possession. The best evidence of its value is in the fact that so many have copied it and that art dealers who have no reputation to establish are eager to assert that any portrait that has the slightest resemblance to a Stuart is genuine. Once a Stuart always a Stuart is a proverb. Age will [illegible] it. Others change.

JOHN TRUMBULL, the artist who painted Washington in his heroic military portrait which hangs in the governor's room of the city hall of New York, was the son of the famous war governor of Connecticut who was known as Brother Jonathan, a title bestowed upon him by Washington. The artist was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and was on the staff of Washington. It was while serving the commander that Trumbull made sketches of him. In 1791, the year after he had painted the portrait that was accepted by the city of New York, Trumbull was commissioned by Charleston, S. C., to paint a Washington portrait for that city. The artist chose General Washington in full uniform as he appeared on the battlefield at Trenton. It met with the subject's approval.

REMBRANDT PEALE, painter, lecturer, writer and old school gentleman, was born on Washington's birthday while Washington was at Valley Forge with his army. At an early day he became a favorite with the Father of His Country. His first portrait of Washington is now in New York. He was regarded as one of the great painters of his day. He came of a family of artists. His father, Charles Willson Peale; his brother Raphael and his uncle James were all favored jointly by Washington with three sittings in Philadelphia in 1795. Next to the portraits of Gilbert Stuart the Peale paintings of Washington are probably the best known to the public. Peale's father was a soldier in the Revolutionary struggle and was an ardent admirer of Washington.

EDWARD SAVAGE, an artist of acknowledged genius and versatility, was born in Princeton, Mass. He began as a goldsmith and afterward developed as an engraver and artist. He was a resident of Philadelphia for many years. While living there he met Washington, who gave him a number of sittings. The first was of cabinet size. It was in possession of the artist's granddaughter, who was living in Massachusetts not long ago. The Washington portrait in the Harvard collection was painted by Savage. He was commissioned to do the canvas by Harvard college. Savage also painted the portrait of Washington which is in the New England Museum and Gallery of Fine Arts. It is known as the "Family Group at Mount Vernon." Sartain made an engraving from it.

JAMES SHARPLESS was an English painter. He studied in London under Romney. He made two visits to the United States, the first in 1794, the second in 1809. He is best known by his colored crayons and cabinet portraits. Nearly all his pictures of Washington are profiles—something unusual in Washington portraiture. By the artists of his day as well as the artists of the present time the work of Sharpless is regarded as meritorious. Quite a number of his portraits are extant. A noted one is in the residence of General G. W. C. Lee of Virginia. It is believed by many that it is an excellent canvas. Sharpless ranked high in his profession in England. When he came to this country he was actuated in so doing largely by his love for Washington.

CHARLES WILLSON PEALE, father of Rembrandt Peale, painted the first miniature of Washington from life. He was also the first to execute a life size portrait of Washington. This was in 1772. Peale had returned from Europe and was invited to visit Mount Vernon. The portrait referred to is a three-quarter length and represents the subject in the dress of a colonel of militia of the colony of Virginia. Washington also sat for Peale for the portrait ordered by congress in 1777. This portrait is well known to the public. It represents Washington in full uniform, with his hand on a cannon. It was finished in 1789. Congress forgot to make an appropriation [illegible] never received a dollar for his great work. The portrait is in the Smithsonian institution.

GIUSEPPE CERRACHI, the Italian sculptor, never saw Washington, but he carved a notable bust of the great American which has been admired. He must have done his work from a Washington portrait, and yet to the critical eye there is nothing in it that exactly resembles any of the portraits with which the public is familiar. This is not saying that the bust does not possess merit. The life of the sculptor had an unhappy ending. He was executed in 1801 on the charge of having been engaged in a conspiracy against Bonaparte. He was born in Corsica in 1760. He made a bust of the first consul. Previous to this work he had been in Rome. He was forced to flee from the Eternal City because of his efforts there to establish a new government.

THE MIMIC WORLD

GUY STANDING and Theodore Roberts will produce at the Opera House Thursday evening of this week "The Right of Way," which is a dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same name. Eugene Presbrey, who is responsible for the stage version of "Raffles," dramatized "The Right of Way." Klaw and Erlanger have given the drama a splendid stage setting and a cast of more than ordinary ability. When "The Right of Way" is seen at the Opera House, the managers promise that the company will be the same as the original in every instance save one. Klaw and Erlanger are one of the prominent theatrical firms that have come to realize that it pays to send good companies on the road. When Lillian Russell comes to the Opera House in March, under the same management, she will be supported by her metropolitan cast.

There are, in "The Right of Way," two characters that predominate the play. The other parts are minor in significance and appear but little in the action of the drama. These two characters are Charley Steele, the cynical fellow, whose eternal "Who knows?" runs throughout the play, and Joe Portugais, the rough Canadian who saves Steele from death in return for a kindness once bestowed upon him by the latter. Guy Standing, an actor of wide experience, and Theodore Roberts, who is considered by many to be the greatest character player in the country, are seen in these two roles.

The success of "The Right of Way" on the road has been nothing short of wonderful. When produced in New York last season, during the very heart of the panic, the play had but a short career, but on tour it has been the most successful attraction out, which goes to show that while theatergoers pay some attention to the critical approval of New York, this approval is not at all necessary, if the managers have something worth while to offer.

BEN GREET—RUSSIAN SYMPHONY.

Arrangements have been definitely completed for the appearance here in April of the Ben Greet players and the Russian Symphony orchestra in a production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mendelssohn's exquisite incidental music. Two performances will probably be given, and in addition to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," either "Romeo and Juliet," with Gounod's accompaniment, or "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with Nicolai's setting will be given. This engagement promises to be the biggest and most important of the spring season. The Russian Symphony orchestra is ranked with the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic organizations.

AMUSEMENTS AT THE THEATERS.

In addition to the engagement of "The Right of Way" Thursday, Rosabel Morrison will appear at the Opera House tomorrow in her father's version of "Faust," with a special matinee in honor of Washington's birthday. A new scenic equipment has been made for Miss Morrison, and the southern papers speak highly of the acting of the company. The Majestic theater offers another program of good vaudeville, and the new improvements being made at that theater make it most attractive.

SOTHERN'S DENVER ENGAGEMENT.

Edward H. Sothern appears at the Broadway theater, Denver, this week for the first time in three years, in a repertoire of three plays, "Lord Dundreary," "Hamlet" and "Richelieu." Sothern was booked in Chicago and other eastern cities before it was decided to send him west, and these dates cannot be changed, so Sothern will not be able to play any city in Colorado except Denver.

Sothern, since the death of the late Richard Mansfield, has been called the leader of the American stage, by right of his ability as a player, his scholarship, and his worthy productions of classic and modern drama. His "Hamlet" is said to be unequaled on the American stage today, and his "Lord Dundreary" to be the best example of real comedy in recent years. This is his first season in "Richelieu," as the production was made during his engagement in San Francisco last month. He was last seen in Denver three years ago, when he appeared as a costar with Julia Marlowe in classic and romantic repertoire. His last local appearance was in 1904 when he was seen in "The Proud Prince."

The Week's Offerings

Monday, "Faust."

Rosabel Morrison, daughter of the late Lewis Morrison, appears at the Opera House tomorrow in a revival of her father's greatest success, with special scenic and musical features. The company has just returned from a southern tour, where the papers spoke highly of Miss Morrison, her company and her production. There will be a special matinee tomorrow afternoon on account of Washington's birthday.

Thursday, "The Right of Way."

Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts, two players of fine experience and ability, and the only male co-stars now on the road, will make their first joint appearance in this city at the Opera House Thursday, in a dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel "The Right of Way." Klaw and Erlanger have given the play a superb stage production, and the entire metropolitan cast, with only one exception, will be seen.

At the Majestic All Week:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Esmond in the dramatic playlet, "The Soldier of Propville;" James and Lucy Cooper, "The Chattering Chums;" Johnnie Fields, Jr., late star of "Yankee Doodle Boy" Co., who is "Telling Tales in Vaudeville;" Mallia and Bart in an acrobatic absurdity, "The Baggage Smashers;" Miss Carrie McManus, soprano soloist, and the Majesticope, showing an excellent travel picture, "A Trip to Borneo."

What Press Agents Say

"THE RIGHT OF WAY."

Sir Gilbert Parker's stirring drama, "The Right of Way," under the management of Klaw and Erlanger, with Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts, will come to the Opera house for one performance on Thursday evening.

This work has created a great impression on the theater-going public for the past year, and it is now acknowledged to be one of the finest acting triumphs ever presented.

In the first act of "The Right of Way" Guy Standing, as Charley Steele, presents a study in acting which more completely displays the remarkable versatility of this actor than any work he has ever done on the stage. The cynical, reckless and tarnished personality of "Steele" is thrown into bold relief in a series of encounters with the judge whom he flaunts, the wife whom he has wronged, the murderer whom he has saved, the lover whom he defies, and the drunken parson and boyish reprobate whom he has led to ruin. These incidents of the story of the first act are shown in swift sequence and are very effective. Mr. Standing artistically displays every feature of the character most convincingly. His work in this act is in sharp contrast to his work in the following three acts, in which the regeneration of Steele is shown after the attack on him at the Cote Dorion, which leads to his complete loss of memory of his own personality.

Theodore Roberts, as Joe Portugais, the Canadian riverman, presents a character which is so colored in its contrast that, notwithstanding its strength, it does not in any way detract from the splendid work of Mr. Standing; even though it is generally accepted as a fact that a strong character part of a type which Mr. Roberts plays will usually overshadow all others in a cast, even though the play may be but "a bit." In this production, however, Mr. Roberts plays a role which is co-important with that of Mr. Standing, and fully as conspicuous in the development of the story. The company has been highly praised by the entire press of the United States and the organization is regarded by competent critics as being one of the most capable aggregations of talent ever presented.

MORRISON'S "FAUST" MATINEE.

There will be a special Washington's birthday matinee of "Faust" tomorrow afternoon at popular prices. Adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents.

That Goethe's "Faust" is the greatest, which is to say the most nearly diabolical satire ever written, almost every one is willing to acknowledge. Not that almost every one knows anything about it, but it is the fashion, and for once for a wonder fashion agrees with fact. An epidemic of plays dealing with the devil has suddenly become the vogue, and good old Mephisto is evidently smiling the familiar smirk of exultation as he sees the whole play-going public "going to the devil." The revival of the old classic "Faust" by Rosabel Morrison the present season has been attended by the most gratifying results, being witnessed by a succession of houses "packed to the doors" such as the play has not known in its career of a quarter of a century. Goethe's idea was "this life is all a fleeting show for man's illusion given," a fit subject for laughter. He conceived that Mephistopheles was merely a cynic, a laughing philosopher, and that, to him, the world is only an amusing and bitter jest that he has stumbled across in a tour around the universe.

Morrison's "Faust" as it will be presented at the Opera house tomorrow matinee and night, will show many innovations in text and scenes. It will be presented by a cast of players that includes in its personnel Miss Rosabel Morrison as Marguerite and Edward N. Hoyt as Mephisto. With a magnificent scenic environment, and every possible adjunct that science and electricity has made possible, Rosabel Morrison is presenting the present season the world's greatest legend in dramatic form in a most spectacular and gratifying manner.

FAMOUS STARS IN LEGITIMATE PLAY AT MAJESTIC THIS WEEK

The most important engagement in the theatrical firmament this week at the Majestic is that of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Esmond in the dramatic playlet "The Soldier of Propville." The artists are honored stars from the legitimate stage whose past achievements have earned them the respect and admiration of highly cultured and critical audiences who witnessed their various character creations upon the stages of the highest priced theaters in the larger cities.

Opie Read once said: "The people like the funny things they see and hear on the stage or lecture platform, but it is the little touch of sentiment that they remember." What Mr. Read said is true.

There will be a good bill of six acts at the Majestic this week. One of the acts is sentimental, that of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Esmond. After a person has seen the whole bill he goes out of the theater remembering the Esmond sketch, "The Soldier of Propville." It is a very well presented sentiment of the plain, old-fashioned kind that reaches the heart. The story is that of an old soldier who was injured in the war and sent to an asylum crazy. He regained his health, but not his memory. He says he is 25 years old because he has been out of the asylum 25 years. The act was written by a Detroit young man, Mr. St. [illegible] Collins, who sent it to Mr. Esmond. Several years later, while playing in Detroit, Mr. Esmond [illegible] for the first time.

"The character of old Jim is great," said Mr. Esmond. "I don't see where you get the idea."

"Come out to my home tomorrow," said the young man. "I want you to take dinner with us."

Mr. and Mrs. Esmond accepted the invitation. They went to a little home at [illegible]. After they had been in the parlor a while with their host, an old gray-haired man entered. He [illegible] down near Mr. Esmond. Then he placed his hand on his shoulder.

"Do you know," he said plaintively, "I'm just 25 years old."

It was the father of the writer of the sketch.

To those numerous admirers of the Zingari singers the acting and versatility of the [illegible] and their dramatic little play will appeal most strongly for the combination is one that appeals to the intellect as well as the heart in its absorbing interest.

Other acts, features and novelties on the program will include James and Lucy Cooper, who are announced as "The Chattering Chums." The comedians and their sketch is a big feature of the vaudeville life of the day that never fails to amuse. The Coopers are rare entertainers, whose banter is a continuous run of light rollicking comedy of the Jambalaye sort, and none of it is slow.

Johnnie Fields, Jr., late star of the "Yankee Doodle Boy" company, is allotted 12 minutes on the stage, but this is frequently lengthened into a half hour. Mr. Fields says he is "Telling Tales in Vaudeville." The tales are [illegible] of the amusing sort when he can entertain an audience for 20 minutes.

Mallia and Bart, comedy gymnasts, [illegible] entitled "The Baggage Smashers." It consists of difficult gymnastic feats presented in a laughter-provoking manner. They scored an immense hit in Denver the past week.

Dainty Carrie McManus, the soprano song bird at the Majestic, will offer three new hits of the sort that has won her so many admirers here and the Majesticope will show an interesting travel reel with a "Trip to Borneo."

ADMIRAL EVANS' POPULARITY

Rear Admiral R. D. Evans is the most popular American naval officer before the public. He was always popular. When he was a cadet at the naval academy it was Bob Evans who was the hero of his class. When he took that command on board the yacht America, it was the great personal hold Bob Evans had upon the middies that composed his crew that made it possible for the youngster to do so much with so little. Before the guns of Santiago it was the tremendous affection [illegible] every son of them had for "Fighting Bob" that kept the blue jackets at their work, day and night, day and night, under the merciless rain of shot and shell. And it was the same warm personal feeling his officers had for him that made it feasible for him to make the trip up among the seal pirates.

When the admiral speaks here at the Opera House March 6, he will doubtless show us better than any press report can explain to us beforehand the warm, jovial manliness of this hero of a hundred fights.

Said a near friend of the admiral's the other day, "I have seen Evans under fire in the most trying circumstances. I have seen him chafing under restraint, submitting to orders that had come to him from those who knew less about the matter in hand than he did. I have watched him when he was forced to take his men under fire, and I have seen him make sacrifices for his men, and, under all circumstances, in all places of trial and temptation and hardship, I have never known him to fail in doing the right thing as he saw it, for his country and for those under his command."

Comments on Admiral Evans' Boston lecture, showing the tremendous success he is meeting everywhere:

From the Boston Globe: Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, "Fighting Bob," proved himself last evening one of the most entertaining lecturers that has occupied a Boston platform in many a year. With no more exciting subject than that of the story of the voyage of the fleet of battleships from Hampton Roads to San Francisco last spring, he inspired such an intense and sustained interest on the part of an audience of about 2000 persons as one would hardly think possible save in a narrative of actual warfare.

His description of the commonplace details of preparing and provisioning the fleet preparatory to starting and some of the ordinary incidents of daily life on shipboard were a source of continual amusement and hilarity, so natural was his style of "expressing himself," so original his choice of language and so apt his not infrequent digressions from his main subject.

From the Boston Transcript: With all the traditional ability to spin yarns that is possessed by veteran sailors, Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans entertained a friendly audience in Symphony hall last evening with a story of how he equipped the battleship fleet and took it from Hampton Roads to the Golden Gate of San Francisco. From the time that Rear Admiral Evans appeared on the platform until he left it, his audience was completely under the spell of the personality of the man whom ex-Governor John D. Long introduced as "the foremost retired officer of the United States navy."

AT FAIRYLAND.

Manager Henry Lubeiski of the Fairyland theater is not letting any opportunity slip by to secure the biggest and best vaudeville attractions for his patrons. The headline feature next week will be one of the greatest attractions ever presented in a vaudeville house in America. Lukens's troupe of real live Teddy Bears, seven in number, every one trained with marvelous skill, performing feats with almost human intelligence. Miss Lukens, a woman of uncompromising nerve, makes the bears go through all manner of stunts, some provoking rounds of applause. It will take over eight thousand admissions to pay the salary of this one feature and yet this feature and four other additional strong acts can be seen at the astonishingly small admission that is charged at the Fairyland theater. A special children's matinee will be given Monday—they will be admitted for half admission. Four shows daily. Be sure and see the real live Teddy Bears. They will please you immensely.

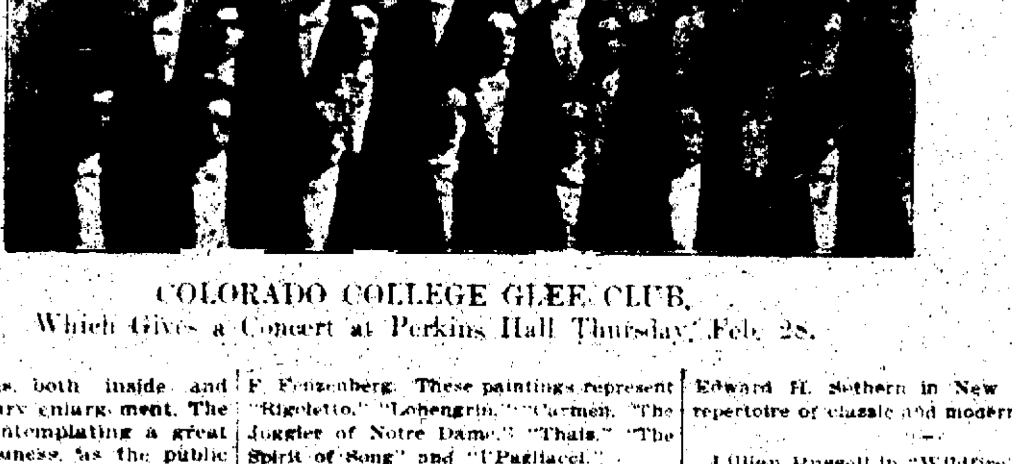

You will see Rooney and Richards in a comedy sketch that is a scream. Sara May will sing "My Bonnie Jean." 2,000 feet of the best moving pictures that ever came to the Springs, and we will have extra ushers to handle the crowds. Our house is small, but our shows are the biggest and best, so you won't feel disappointed when you come to Fairyland to spend an evening.

COLLEGE GLEE CLUB CONCERT.

The music loving public of this city will be pleased to learn of the coming concert of the Colorado College glee club Thursday of this week, both on account of the music they put forth and that the Glee club is a typical college organization, and does more to portray a correct idea of college life than any other phase of college activity.

The club is especially fortunate this year in having for its president Glen Shaw, a college comedian, who actually comedes. Shaw has arranged a number of comic specialties which are new, original and classy. In Mailley, who has charge of the quartet, and does the solo work, and who got his experience on the Lyceum circuit, the club has one of the best soloists ever heard in a college glee club. Mailley was on the Lyceum circuit three years with the best male quartet on the road at that time.

Practice was started October 1, and has been faithfully attended since that time, and at present they have enough numbers to give two concerts.

COLORADO COLLEGE GLEE CLUB,
Which Gives a Concert at Perkins Hall Thursday, Feb. 28.

THE CRYSTAL

Is the only theater where you can see a thoroughly clean up-to-date picture show, with an entire change of program every other day. The picture stories this trip are entirely new and interesting.

The Crystal is busy now figuring on its new decorations, both inside and out and its necessary enlargement. The management is contemplating a great future for the business, as the public is strongly supporting him in his efforts to give them an entertainment that is strictly first class and one that they are glad for the children to witness every opportunity they have to do so. The matinees are especially long and interesting and the shoppers enjoy them as a cosy place to rest and be entertained. Watch Monday's papers for change of program.

ROSABEL MORRISON IN "FAUST."
A Complete New and Spectacular Production of Goethe's "Faust," With Special Music and Cast, Which Comes to the Opera House Tomorrow, Matinee and Night.

Plays and Players

Gowns valued at $10,000 are shown in the last act of each of Henry W. Savage's "The Merry Widow" companies, according to the press agent. It is further claimed that Sonia, the heroine, wears three rich dresses, one of which cost $750, and that the hats worn by the chorus are valued at from $100 to $250 each.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell made her first appearance in London this season last week in a new play by Rudolph Besier called "Olive Latimer's Husband." The play is said to be a distinct disappointment, but Mrs. Campbell seems to have pleased.

It is said that Kyrle Bellew, last seen here in "Raffles," and now starring in "The Thief," will, in a year or so, retire permanently from the stage, and return to England, his native country, where he will write his stage memoirs.

Oscar Hammerstein has placed in position in his new Philadelphia opera house, seven beautiful original oil paintings by F. Fenzenberg. These paintings represent "Rigoletto," "Lohengrin," "Carmen," "The Juggler of Notre Dame," "Thais," "The Spirit of Song" and "I Pagliacci."

Robert Mantell's repertoire this season includes "King Lear," "Macbeth," "The Lady of Lyons," "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice," "Louis XI," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richard III," and "Othello." This is a most pretentious repertoire, and is probably greater than that of any other living players.

Alla Nazimova, the Russian actress, whose work in [illegible] was one of the biggest successes of last season in New York, is meeting with big success this year on the road. Ibsen, when presented correctly by players who know what they are playing, is one of the most interesting of all authors.

"The Right of Way," Klaw and Erlanger's production of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, comes to the Opera House soon with Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts in the leading roles. The managers promise the entire original New York company and the original stage production.

The Ben Greet players, together with the Russian Symphony orchestra, are doing the largest business of any theatrical organization on the road, according to reports. This combination presents various Shakespearean plays with incidental music, and will go to the Pacific coast in the spring.

Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family" was one of the biggest artistic successes of last season in New York city. The New York Sun at the close of the dramatic season declared that the past season will been notable for two things: the acting of Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family," and the appearance of Edward H. Sothern in New York in a repertoire of classic and modern drama.

Lillian Russell in "Wildfire" will soon be at the Opera House. Miss Russell is now working on the editing of her love letters, according to her press agent, but according to Miss Russell these delicious notes of fondness were long ago destroyed, for the beautiful Lillian always believed that it was best to destroy letters as fast as she had destroyed her passion for the man who wrote them. Next season Miss Russell will be seen in a new play.

"The [illegible] of [illegible]," in which Julia Marlowe is starring this season is rather long, and consequently the management decided to begin promptly at 8 o'clock instead of 8:15. The public in the cities where Miss Marlowe is appearing thought that this early opening was just talk and so came to the theater late. The management refused everyone admittance who was late and [illegible]

My Secrets of Beauty

by Madame Lina Cavalieri "The Most Famous Beauty in the World"

MME. LINA CAVALIERI, the famous beauty and the well-known grand opera soprano, who has made a life-long study of beauty culture and has, indeed, herself worked out many recipes whose secrets are her own, has arranged to write for this newspaper a series of extremely interesting and valuable articles on the Secrets of Beauty. Her article for next Sunday will be on the Hair, with recipes, advice and suggestions which every woman will be glad to know.

"I have my maid dips a sponge in the cold water and dabs the upper part of my body quickly with it."

"I permit myself just twenty minutes in the tub. More than that is weakening."

"I give my face vigorous inspection. I carefully scrutinize it."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

FOR the cornerstone of the care of the complexion I depend upon the body bath. We who would be beautiful get many hints from our physician, who is himself not at all beautiful, but who, if we obey him, can make us so. He talks about "local treatment" and "general treatment," and he tells you that in most cases general treatment is far more thorough than local.

That is the reason that I depend upon the body bath more than anything else for my care of the complexion. It is general treatment, while massage and the application of lotions and creams are local treatment. Both are needful, but the daily body bath is indispensable.

To make the bath tonic stimulant and agreeable I have made many experiments. The most successful I have found to be this:

To a tub half full of water add one pound of table salt and one pint of violet ammonia.

The bath should be prepared ten minutes before one enters it, for the salt should be thoroughly dissolved and the ammonia should have been thoroughly mixed with the bath.

This I vary by the use of one pound of sea salt and half a pint of aromatic vinegar.

These preparations being of an astringent nature should not be used every day. Three times a week are enough for their tonic effect. For a soothing bath I leave off the salt and pour into the tub:

One ounce of tincture of benzoin and two bath pastilles, scented to your taste, but never colored.

This is the way I take it. As soon as I rise in the morning I plunge into my tepid bath. The temperature I take myself, to be sure that my maid has made no mistake. When the thermometer which I thrust into the water registers about 98 degrees Fahrenheit I am satisfied. If higher, it is too warm. If lower, it is too cold.

I permit myself just twenty minutes in the tub. More than that is weakening. While in the tub I play about as joyfully as a young porpoise. I plunge and flounder and toss up a shower of water with my hands, for to lie lazily in a tub of water is to invite rheumatism and neuralgia. I rub upon the brush quantities of the purest scented soap I can get. I try first this, then that soap. I am always trying to find something I like better than the last. I scrub my body vigorously—as vigorously as the women of the Loire pound their clothes upon the stones up the river.

I rise, streaming with rills of soapy water, and take a cold shower bath upon my shoulders. Perhaps I use the hose attached to the bath. Perhaps I catch the water as it flows from the cold faucet in my hands and throw it over my shoulders. Perhaps my maid dips a sponge in the cold water and dabs the upper part of my body quickly with it. Then out of the tub I spring upon my bath mat and give to myself, or my maid gives me, a quick rub with eau de cologne. Thus the three purposes of my bath are fulfilled. The warm water is cleansing. No one but an Englishman believes that a cold tub cleanses the body. It merely galvanizes it. To be clean we must use warm or hot water, and hot water weakens the bather.

From the tepid water I am clean. It has left the pores open as so many hungry mouths. The dash of cold water closes them. It shocks and stimulates the skin, making the blood, which has rushed to the centres of the body, bound back again to the surface. The eau de cologne rubbed slowly opens the sealed pores again. Then comes the fourth and final stage of my bath. It is the exercise.

"While in the tub I play about as joyfully as a young porpoise. I plunge and flounder and toss up a shower of water with my hands, for to lie lazily in a tub is to invite rheumatism and neuralgia."

"I rise streaming with rills of water."

The exercise may be running about my bedroom a dozen times, taking the sun bath. The body is too much clothed. This is the only time that it ever drinks in the sunlight. To take the sun bath at any other time would be dangerous, but immediately after the tub it is beneficial. If the day be a cloudy one I take, instead of the sun bath, my breathing exercises.

Twenty-five times I raise my arms slowly in front of me until they are stretched straight and high over my head. Then slowly I drop them again heavily, as though my hands were of lead, at my sides. This at a distance of about three feet from the open window, I am wrapped in a woollen bathrobe. Always a woollen bathrobe.

Thus for the general treatment. Now for the local. I sit in my dressing chair, which has a back reaching halfway to my shoulders. If the back were higher it would prevent a free movement of my body when I brush my hair or massage my face.

While I have been in the tub I have not washed my face. It is now to be the first bath. The bath is still not a liquid one. It is of cold cream. I give you here one of my favorite recipes:

Rose-water	500 grams
Oil of sweet almonds	500 grams
White beeswax	20 grams
Spermaceti	20 grams
Oil of rose	3 grams

All these articles should be absolutely pure. If you do not trust your druggist, send them to a chemist to be analyzed. It is expensive, but it never pays to economize in the complexion. Let me tell you how to prepare the cold cream.

Place the beeswax and the spermaceti in a steamer. The steamer should not be placed upon the stove, for the fire would be too harsh for it and would taint the cream with its odors. Place the steamer, instead, in a pan of hot water and let the mixture be gently heated. With a long-handled wooden spoon stir in slowly the oil of sweet almonds. Drop the rosewater, little by little, into the mixture and stir again. When it is thoroughly mixed, pour it into a stone jar or a china vessel, and when it has cooled add three drops of oil of rose. If you use the oil of rose before the mixture has cooled, the perfume will evaporate.

You will have when you have done this an ounce less than a pound, or fifteen ounces, of absolutely cold cream, which will last for many months if you do not waste it.

I massage my face sitting before the mirror of my dressing table. This, I have found, is far better than the lazy way of massaging it while in a reclining position. I want light for massage. I want a stream of it over my shoulder, my left shoulder preferably, falling upon the mirror and showing me any line that I might have acquired since the morning before. Sitting there before the mirror I give my face rigorous inspection. I mercilessly scrutinize it. Wherever there is the slightest tracery upon the smooth surface upon that spot I concentrate. I massage my face for ten minutes, always keeping in mind the purpose of the massage.

That is, that wrinkle is caused by defective circulation in one spot, and that the way to remove them is to increase the circulation in that spot. Sending a fresh supply of blood to the sunken region will tend to fill out and plump it.

Therefore I concentrate on the region from the corners of the lips to the chin. It is that region where the ugly diagonal lines come and hint of ill temper or illness or old age on the space between the eyebrows where the lines of worry form on the area about the outer corners of the eyes an area corrugated by too much laughter, all these and the rest of the face I massage by quick, light pats of the cushions of the ends of the fingers—light, but firm.

Always with a motion round and round. A lengthwise motion causes the muscles to sag and pulls the skin loose from the muscles. It is very bad. After the rotary movement I go over the face with quick, light, but stinging slaps. With a square of thin, soft linen I remove any surplus of grease that has not been absorbed in the pores.

For the skin that becomes overheated and looks feverish after massage, this cooling, soothing lotion may be used.

Extract of violette	350 grams
Extract of rose	35 grams
Tincture of orris	80 grams

Dashed upon the face after the morning massage, it is deliciously cooling and refreshing. If you do not care for the liquid face bath, fluffing daintily over the face a powder puff dipped in rice powder is sufficient.

To the window I go, hand mirror in hand, for a further inspection before applying the rice powder. I see, perhaps, acne, a bit of what you in this country call "blackhead," at the side of my nose. I hasten to remove it. How? Not by pressing it out. No, no. That leaves an ugly hole in the skin. It is a mutilation of the face. No. I search for a match or a wooden toothpick. Then I take from my toilet table one of two preparations. Each is good.

Rosewater	½ wineglass
Peroxide of hydrogen	½ wineglass

Shake well in a glass. Dip the match into the mixture and press the dampened end upon the blackhead.

It does not remove it, but cleanses its color to white.

Or I use this, which I think is milder:

Rosewater	2-3 wineglass
Ammonia	1-3 wineglass

Shake well together in a tumbler. Dip the end of the toothpick or match in it and use as other preparation. Like that, it cleanses without removing the acne.

If my plans for the day include a railway journey or an automobile spin, I prepare my complexion for the ordeal. Before going out I massage the face again with cold cream and dust it once more with rice powder. This fortifies the face for the whirlwind of smoke or dust it encounters. When I return, to thoroughly cleanse the face, I steam it. Into my stationary wash bowl I pour two quarts of boiling water and one ounce of tincture of benzoin. I bend forward and place my face as close to this as possible. I wrap about my head a towel and swathe the towel—a big, Turkish one—about my shoulders and the edge of the bowl, so that no steam can escape. So I remain until I feel that my face drips with perspiration and until I am nearly suffocated by steam. Then, sitting up straight, I dab one of the linen squares about my face and cool it by a hand bath of eau de cologne.

Or, if the journey has been taken in summer, and I am tanned or freckled in consequence, I apply this:

One wineglass full of rosewater; fifteen drops peroxide of hydrogen.

I bathe the face with this preparation and leave it on the skin for fifteen minutes, then remove it by massaging the face with the cold cream for which I have given a prescription or with rosewater. The peroxide is drastic, and should only be used in emergencies.

And now the day is past and I am ready to retire. Again I think of my complexion. For the first time that day I really wash my face.

First, it has a bath of soap and water. I use plenty of soap, but make a lather of it in the bowl, instead of placing it directly on my face. Plunging my hands into the soapy water, I bathe my face with the palms of my hands. Never do I use anything else. A sponge or a cloth is too harsh. There is nothing softer than the palms of a woman's hands. They are softer than silk and because they are the softest objects I know I bathe the delicate skin of the face with them. After the warm water face bath I rinse the bowl and the face with cool, not cold, water. Cold water is too severe.

Then again, the ten minutes of massage with the cold cream. Then to bed. I feel that I have done for my complexion the duty I owe it. I owe it but one more to sleep for eight hours in a room where the windows are as wide open as possible, my bed being out of the draught and myself well covered with blankets, for to be cold is to commit a crime against the complexion.

One other precaution I may take if the morning inspection has revealed that there are pimples on the face. It is a remedy, most simple, but efficacious.

In the morning bath a handful of starch. Before retiring a paste spread over the face and made thus:

One tumbler half full of water. The remainder filled with starch. Stir to a thick paste.

Tie around the face a towel fastened securely by a safety pin at the top of the head.

No. 2. A Day With My Complexion

"My maid gives me a quick rub with eau de cologne."

"Fluffing daintily over the face with a powder puff dipped in rice powder is sufficient."

"For the skin that looks feverish after massage, use this cooling lotion."

THE GENTLE VOICE

From an Exchange

One of the foremost of American novelists complains that the gentle voice of woman is becoming a thing of the past He says that not only is this the case in America but that travel has revealed to him such a tendency in Europe There may be some ground for this writer's contention but it seems that he runs to exaggeration if not to misrepresentation. Against his charge as an individual there is the testimony of many that women in this country at least, are growing in care of the voice Further there has become manifest in the last decade a decided improvement in the speaking voices of women in all grades of society

The nasal effect which once was so marked an American defect is growing less and less noticeable in America. It is significant of improvement that the farther west the traveler goes the more pronounced becomes the nasal speech In the east the voices of both men and women seem to be steadily improving The growth of refinement does not make for hard, unmusical voices, and even this misdirected novelist turned critic can not deny refinement is growing here Voice culture has become an imperative study for every young woman whose family pretends to any social position and under this condition it is well nigh impossible that "the gentle voice" can disappear

WHY CHILE DIDN'T COMPETE

From the Chicago Tribune

As the search in the different nations for the most beautiful woman in the world is drawing nearly to a close word comes from Chile that that country absolutely refuses to take part in the quest for an exceedingly strange reason Mme Sofia de Schiavetti is dead and, as she was far beyond compare the most beautiful woman in Chile—and as the Chileans believe the most beautiful in the world—what they ask, is the use in prolonging the search?

Mme de Schiavetti was for many years the reigning beauty of Valparaiso She was the daughter of an old and aristocratic Italian family which settled in South America during the last century Before her marriage she led the secluded life of a young girl in the Latin countries of South America [illegible] she immediately became [illegible] favorite as much [illegible] for her purity and goodness as she was [illegible] for her extraordinary beauty Even after the birth of her daughter she was the belle of Chile and it seemed indeed as if motherhood increased her beauty and rendered it more majestic

COULDN'T UNDERSTAND PLAIN ENGLISH

From the Chicago Record-Herald

By the extraordinary contortions of her neck he concluded that she was trying to get a glimpse of the back of her new blouse, by the tense line and scintillating flash about her lips he concluded that her mouth was full of pins

"Umph — goof—suff—wuff — sh—ffapog?" she asked

"Quite so my dear" he agreed "It looks very nice"

"Ouff—wuff — w—g—pn — muf—ugh—tght" was her next remark

Perhaps it would look better if you did that he nodded, "but it fits very nicely as it is"

She gasped and emptied the pins into her hands

"I've asked you twice to raise the blinds so that I can get more light James" she exclaimed "Can't you understand plain English

TAKING NO CHANCES

An evening company was given last week by a young man of the north western section of the city to [illegible] of his friends and their lady acquaintances It was an enjoyable affair and the company did not break up until nearly midnight When the guests arrived in the early evening the moon was shining from a clear sky but when they started home it was pouring rain

He told his friends and there was a general appeal for umbrellas The host admitted to owning two and [illegible] none [illegible] of the guests however accidentally discovered several hidden away in a remote corner and [illegible] drawing one out said

"I'll borrow this one for Miss — and myself"

Looking abashed the host [illegible] [illegible] you won't This is [illegible] I got [illegible]

SUCH A HUNGRY TALE

RICH STRIKE MADE ON THE MATTIE L.

VALUES AS HIGH AS SEVEN OUNCES TO TON.

Explorations Have Been Conducted Through the Main Shaft of the Anchoria-Leland.

Special to the Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Feb. 20.—A rich strike is reported made on the Mattie L. mine, on Gold Hill, operated under lease by L. G. Henry and Ralph Seaver of this city, and owned by the Jefferson Gold Mining company. Operating through the main Anchoria Leland shaft on the ... of Gold hill, these lessees have been making ... ular ... ly ... ents all through the winter months of a ... lding grade ore averaging close to ... gold to the ton.

Three months ago the lessees commenced to crosscut for the same vein and about at the ... foot level, and yesterday broke into the vein. Samples ... across four feet of the vein ... have shown values as high as seven ounces gold to the ton, and a general sample gave values of better than two ounces gold to the ton.

The Mattie L. is a fractional claim of seven acres cut in two by the Chance claim of the Anchoria Leland company. The lessees are operating on the north end of the claim, and the vein encountered is known as the Jefferson vein.

PAY ORE DISCOVERED

Maloney Shaft on Orphan Belle Scene of Find.—Near Line of Isabella Property.

Special to the Gazette

ALTMAN, Colo, Feb 20.—Vidler, Bayley and Baker, operating the Maloney shaft on the Orphan Belle claim of the Isabella Mines company, have opened up a rich ore body at the 200-foot level, near to the western side line, and will load out their first shipment on Monday. The ore was mined to the line by the Pueblo lessees, and a survey has disclosed a near approach over the boundary. From present indications, the ore will extend to surface on Isabella ground, and the Maloney lessees will benefit by their neighbors' work. The ore is returning values by assay test of from $36.50 to $63 a ton.

EL PASO DUMP TO BE TREATED BY WASH PROCESS

Special to the Gazette

CRIPPLE CREEK, Feb. 20.—A prospecting permit, with lease option, on the old dump at the El Paso mine, has been secured by Sam W. Vidler of this city, for local mining men with experience in the handling of this class of ore. It is the intention of the operators to install washers and screens, and by handling a large tonnage, expect to make this low grade ore pay handsomely.

Special to the Gazette

ALTMAN, Colo., Feb. 20.—The Union Leasing company, operating the Deadwood mine of the United Gold Mines company, loaded out a two-car shipment on Friday from the shoot under development at the 165-foot level. OLD ZINC DUMPS ARE RICH IN ORE

A. Y. AND MINNIE MINE MAKING YIELD FROM WASTE.

Ore That Several Years Ago Was Considered in Light of Nuisance, Is Shipped at Profit.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Feb. 20.—Thousands of tons of tailings that 20 and even 15 years ago were wasted and considered almost in the light of a nuisance, are now being shipped with a comfortable margin of profit from both the A. Y. and Minnie and Iron Silver dumps in California gulch. A large force of men is engaged in the work of loading this material into the box cars in which daily shipments are being made.

The product of the A. Y. and Minnie dump is being sent to the plant of the Empire Zinc company at Canon City, while that of the Moyer goes to the local plant of the American Zinc Extraction company. Some shipments have also been made to the smelters in Kansas. It was from the A. Y. and Minnie that the Guggenheim family started its fortune.

For the last year activity in the movement of this refuse has been under way here, but for the last few months the shipments have been much heavier. There is enough material in those old dumps, it is thought, to provide an output for more than a year to come.

It is hard to estimate how much of this waste was actually lost through its deposition into the California gulch stream in the early days. During the early operation of the mines there, it was never calculated that the tailings would at any time be of value. All were turned into the water and washed away.

Later complaint was made by the residents of the gulch that the tailings in the stream polluted the water and they could no longer use it for domestic purposes. Proceedings were started and the mine operators constructed the huge cribs which now contain this material.

At the present time it is bringing an average of better than $8 per ton, it is said. It forms an important item in the monthly production from the Leadville district.

HER SAD MISTAKE.

From Tit-Bits.

The club woman closed her book on "Domestic Responsibility," and with a tinge of remorse, went out on the lawn, where her children were at play.

"Mary," she informed her children's nurse, "I've neglected my young ones for the clubs too much these last few years, and I'm going to try and make amends. Now, this afternoon I intend to dress one of them with my own hands and take it for an outing in the park."

It was quite late that afternoon when the reformed club woman, after pushing a go-cart containing the youngster she had selected and prepared for its outing about the spacious park for several hours, started toward home. She had hardly come within sight of it when the nurse rushed up, palpably agitated.

"Oh, mum ..."

"The child's all right, Mary," the mother announced, by way of assurance. "I humored it all the afternoon with sweets and fruit."

"But, mum," cried the nurse, endeavoring to regain her breath, "Mrs. Smith next door's been scared into a fit, the perlice has been notified, and oh—Lawd, mum!"

"Don't act so, Mary! Why should you get so excited over that hysterical Mrs. Smith?"

"You've gone and took her child, mum!"

THE AUTO IN SYRIA.

From the New York Tribune.

There arrived at Bagdad recently the first postal automobile and it filled the minds of the natives with wonder and awe. The car carried the mails, hitherto borne on camels' backs, from Aleppo, a distance of 625 miles, in 60 hours. This can hardly be called a speed record, but when it is remembered that the roads are rough camel tracks leading through the deep sands of the Syrian desert and the stormy plains of Mesopotamia, the journey at the rate of little more than 10 miles an hour appears creditable.

A jealous man appears to almost as good advantage as a jealous woman.

HUMMING BIRDS ON TOAST.

From the Boston Post.

A man in San Antonio has just ordered 500 humming birds from a game dealer in Mexico. These are to be served as a course in a banquet.

There has never been found in the crop of a humming bird any food but what when alive injured the farmer. Every bird of beautiful plumage that is destroyed means one less mouthful that the farmer can produce. This winter a million robins have been shot in the south for plumage and food. This spells agricultural murder for the north.

The birds of Massachusetts are fast dying out. Like our forests, they must be conserved. Foreigners who have recently come to our shores are especially unscrupulous in slaughtering our bird life. The time must soon come when more drastic laws will be enacted in this state, forbidding the wearing of feathers. Our birds alive are far more valuable to us than their plumage when dead. Agriculture is of more account than ornament.

We are coming to find out that birds are our best citizens. They pipe for our joy and destroy our insect enemies. They stimulate our fancy and eat our slugs.

STEEL INDUSTRIALS ARE DEMORALIZED

ANNOUNCEMENT OF OPEN MARKET CAUSES SLUMP.

Break in Colorado Fuel Reaches Over Seven Points. Banking Position Strengthened.

NEW YORK, Feb 20.—The steel trade position was the one subject of discussion in the stock market today. The chaotic condition into which the steel trade has been thrown by the announced determination of the United States Steel corporation to modify prices in such wise as is necessary to secure business, is fully equaled by the confusion of speculative opinion as to the results to be apprehended from this action. There was evidence in the current comment in the stock market of equal confusion over the motives which prompted the action of the steel interests.

The excited speculative element was inclined to search for secret springs of action on the part of the vast capitalistic groups. Railroad stocks were relatively little affected by the demoralization in the steel industrials and there was a groping effect to read only advantage for the railroads in the meeting of an open market for steel products. Some of the minor steel companies' stocks were much demoralized and slumped violently. The fall in United States Steel was more restrained, influenced by the world-wide participation in the market for that stock. The flood of liquidation in United States Steel was constant, however, and its last price of 46 was the lowest of the day.

The break in Colorado Fuel reached over seven points. Republic Steel preferred 6¾, and the common more than four points. Pennsylvania suffered a decline of 2¼ points in accordance with the large proportion of its traffic, which is made up of steel and steel products. Outside of this and Reading's two-point decline the loss in the railroad list was moderate and at times during the short session there were points of strength in that department. The bank statement declared the strengthening of the banking position has been affected during the week. There was a further wide advance in foreign exchange rates, sufficient to revive discussion of possible gold exports from here to London.

Bonds were irregular with heavy dealings in the southern railway improvement. Total sales, par value, $4,112,000. United States 2s registered declined ⅛ and the coupon advanced ⅛ per cent on call during the week.

WHEAT PRICES REACH NEW HIGH RECORD

MAY DELIVERY SELLS UP TO $1.19 1-4 PER BUSHEL.

Gain Is Not Maintained. However, Market Weakening Under Heavy Realizing Sales.

CHICAGO, Feb 20.—Wheat for May delivery sold here today at $1.16¼ per bushel overtopping by ¾c the record mark for the season recorded during the previous session. The gain however, was not maintained, the market weakening under heavy realizing sales. The close was ⅛ lower to ⅛@¼ higher compared with yesterday's finals. Corn, oats and provisions closed weak.

Wide fluctuations in the price of the May delivery marked trading in the wheat pit, the range for the day being 1⅝. The sharp upturn to a new high level occurred in the first 15 minutes of the day, when May rose to $1.16¼, after opening at $1.15½ to ¾.

The advance was due to buying by prominent longs and by local shorts who were actuated by an advance of ⅜ to ⅝ penny at Liverpool. The bulge brought out liberal realizing sales, part of which were credited to the leader of the bulls. This caused a quick break to $1.14⅞. May, however, rallied and closed heavy at $1.15⅜@⅞. July closed $1.09⅜@½.

Anticipating a liberal movement of corn next week local holders sold freely causing sharp losses in all deliveries. At the close, the prices were ⅝@¾ to 1@1⅛ lower with May at 63½ and July at 64⅛@⅜.

Oats weakened under realizing sales by local longs which caused final losses of ⅛ to ⅞@1⅛. May closed at 54⅜ and July 49⅛.

Provisions were quiet and easy. Prices at the close were a shade to 5@7½ lower.

THE NUMBERING OF HAIRS.

From the Kansas City Journal.

Several years ago, in the course of a state campaign, Tom McNeal, state printer, veteran editor and first class speaker and humorist, made a speech at Attica, the home of Secretary of State C. E. Denton. Both McNeal and Denton are baldheaded.

Denton was directed by the local committee to introduce McNeal, and in doing so, said: "Ladies and gentlemen it affords me the greatest pleasure to introduce to you the baldheaded orator of Kansas."

"H'm! murmured McNeal as he got up, and cast some smiling glances at Denton's shining pate. "H'm. Baldheaded! H'm. Well. The book of book says that every hair in a man's head is numbered. Now every night a record is made of the hairs that I have left. But Denton has so few that long ago the tellers stopped counting his, and every evening when they come to his name on the roll they just slip in a blank."

A REGULAR RADIATOR.

From the Chicago News.

"The young man is smitten with you, Jeannette. He says you radiate happiness."

"Gracious!"

"And he also said you radiate beauty."

"My!"

"And wisdom."

"Dear me, how funny."

"Why, he must thing I am a radiator."

BABY'S HAIR.

From London Punch.

Mother (to children who have come to be inspected before going to a party)—Well darlings you look very nice but ... baby dear I think your hair is rather overdone.

Elder Sister—Oh, mother do you think so? All the best babies are wearing it like that this year.

NEW USE FOR AUTOMOBILES

From the Quitman (Ga.) Free Press.

For the past two years automobiles have been a veritable fad among the prosperous citizens of Quitman, and it is probable that there are as many machines in Quitman as in any town of its size in the state. E. C. Bullres, a prominent railroad and sawmill man having grown weary of his touring car as a toy, is trying to turn it into a uniquely practical use. He is having flanged wheels fitted upon it to use it on the South Georgia railway between here and Perry, Fla., whither his business takes him every week.

HALF SHEET FOR $1,000,000 WILL

Milwaukee Dispatch to the New York World.

Property worth $1,000,000 is disposed of by a half sheet of foolscap covered with scraggly chirography, which was filed with the registrar of probate Monday. It is the will of Alfred Gillman, who died in New York about one week ago. After disposing of $70,000 in bequests of $700 to $5,000 each, the testator leaves the residue of the estate to his three sisters, Mrs. Caroline S. Camman, Mrs. Helen G. Tuttle, and Mrs. Olivia Drew.

BURNS' FAVORITE WORD.

From the Glasgow News.

A contributor has had the curiosity to look up Mr. J. B. Reid's "Burns Concordance" and measure the amount of space devoted to certain words. In the result he found that Burns uses the word "heart" more than any other, the quotations under this word filling no fewer than six of the closely printed columns. "Lass," "friend" and "heaven" come next, each having about two columns.

COLORADO SPRINGS GAZETTE

SMART EVENING FROCKS

THERE'S A CERTAIN CHARMing grace about the evening frocks of the present season that makes them not only modish but beautiful. Scarcely a dress for evening wear this Spring but is a real "picture gown." Each frock seems to add to the smartness of its general style the individual grace of its own loveliness.

In the gown at the extreme left, the "severity" of the original classic model is lightened by just the right touch of Parisienne daintiness. The dress is of catawba messaline, the bodice and sleeves laid in folds, the sleeves themselves being finished by wide bands of Irish lace.

A band of messaline in a vivid, yet artistic shade of blue is brought around from the back and forms a rosette in the center of the corsage.

A sash of the same material and shade is placed low on the skirt, so that the ends reach to the hem of the gown.

The girl next to her wears a frock of yellow crepe de chine, draped and caught at one side at the waist line with a buckle and sash ends.

The band on the bodice, and again on the sleeves, is embroidered in light and darker shades of silk, giving an attractive effect of iridescence.

This dress must be made over a silk lining in order to have the drapery fall gracefully.

The young woman sitting down is dressed in dark blue net over dark blue satin.

The sleeves and cross piece in front are of blue chiffon.

The girdle, which, by the way, crosses in front, and the shoulder straps are of dark blue satin.

Long ends of satin, edged with fringe and fastened with a big jet buckle, fall from the shoulder.

At the extreme right is shown a fascinating frock of pale green satin. The gown is made in the simplest possible fashion, in the newest adaptation of the Empire style. The sleeves straps and the bands across the bodice are of blue and silver embroidery.

Work and Play for the Idle Hour

Shirtwaist Design in Solid Embroidery

Drawn by Sarah Hale Hunter

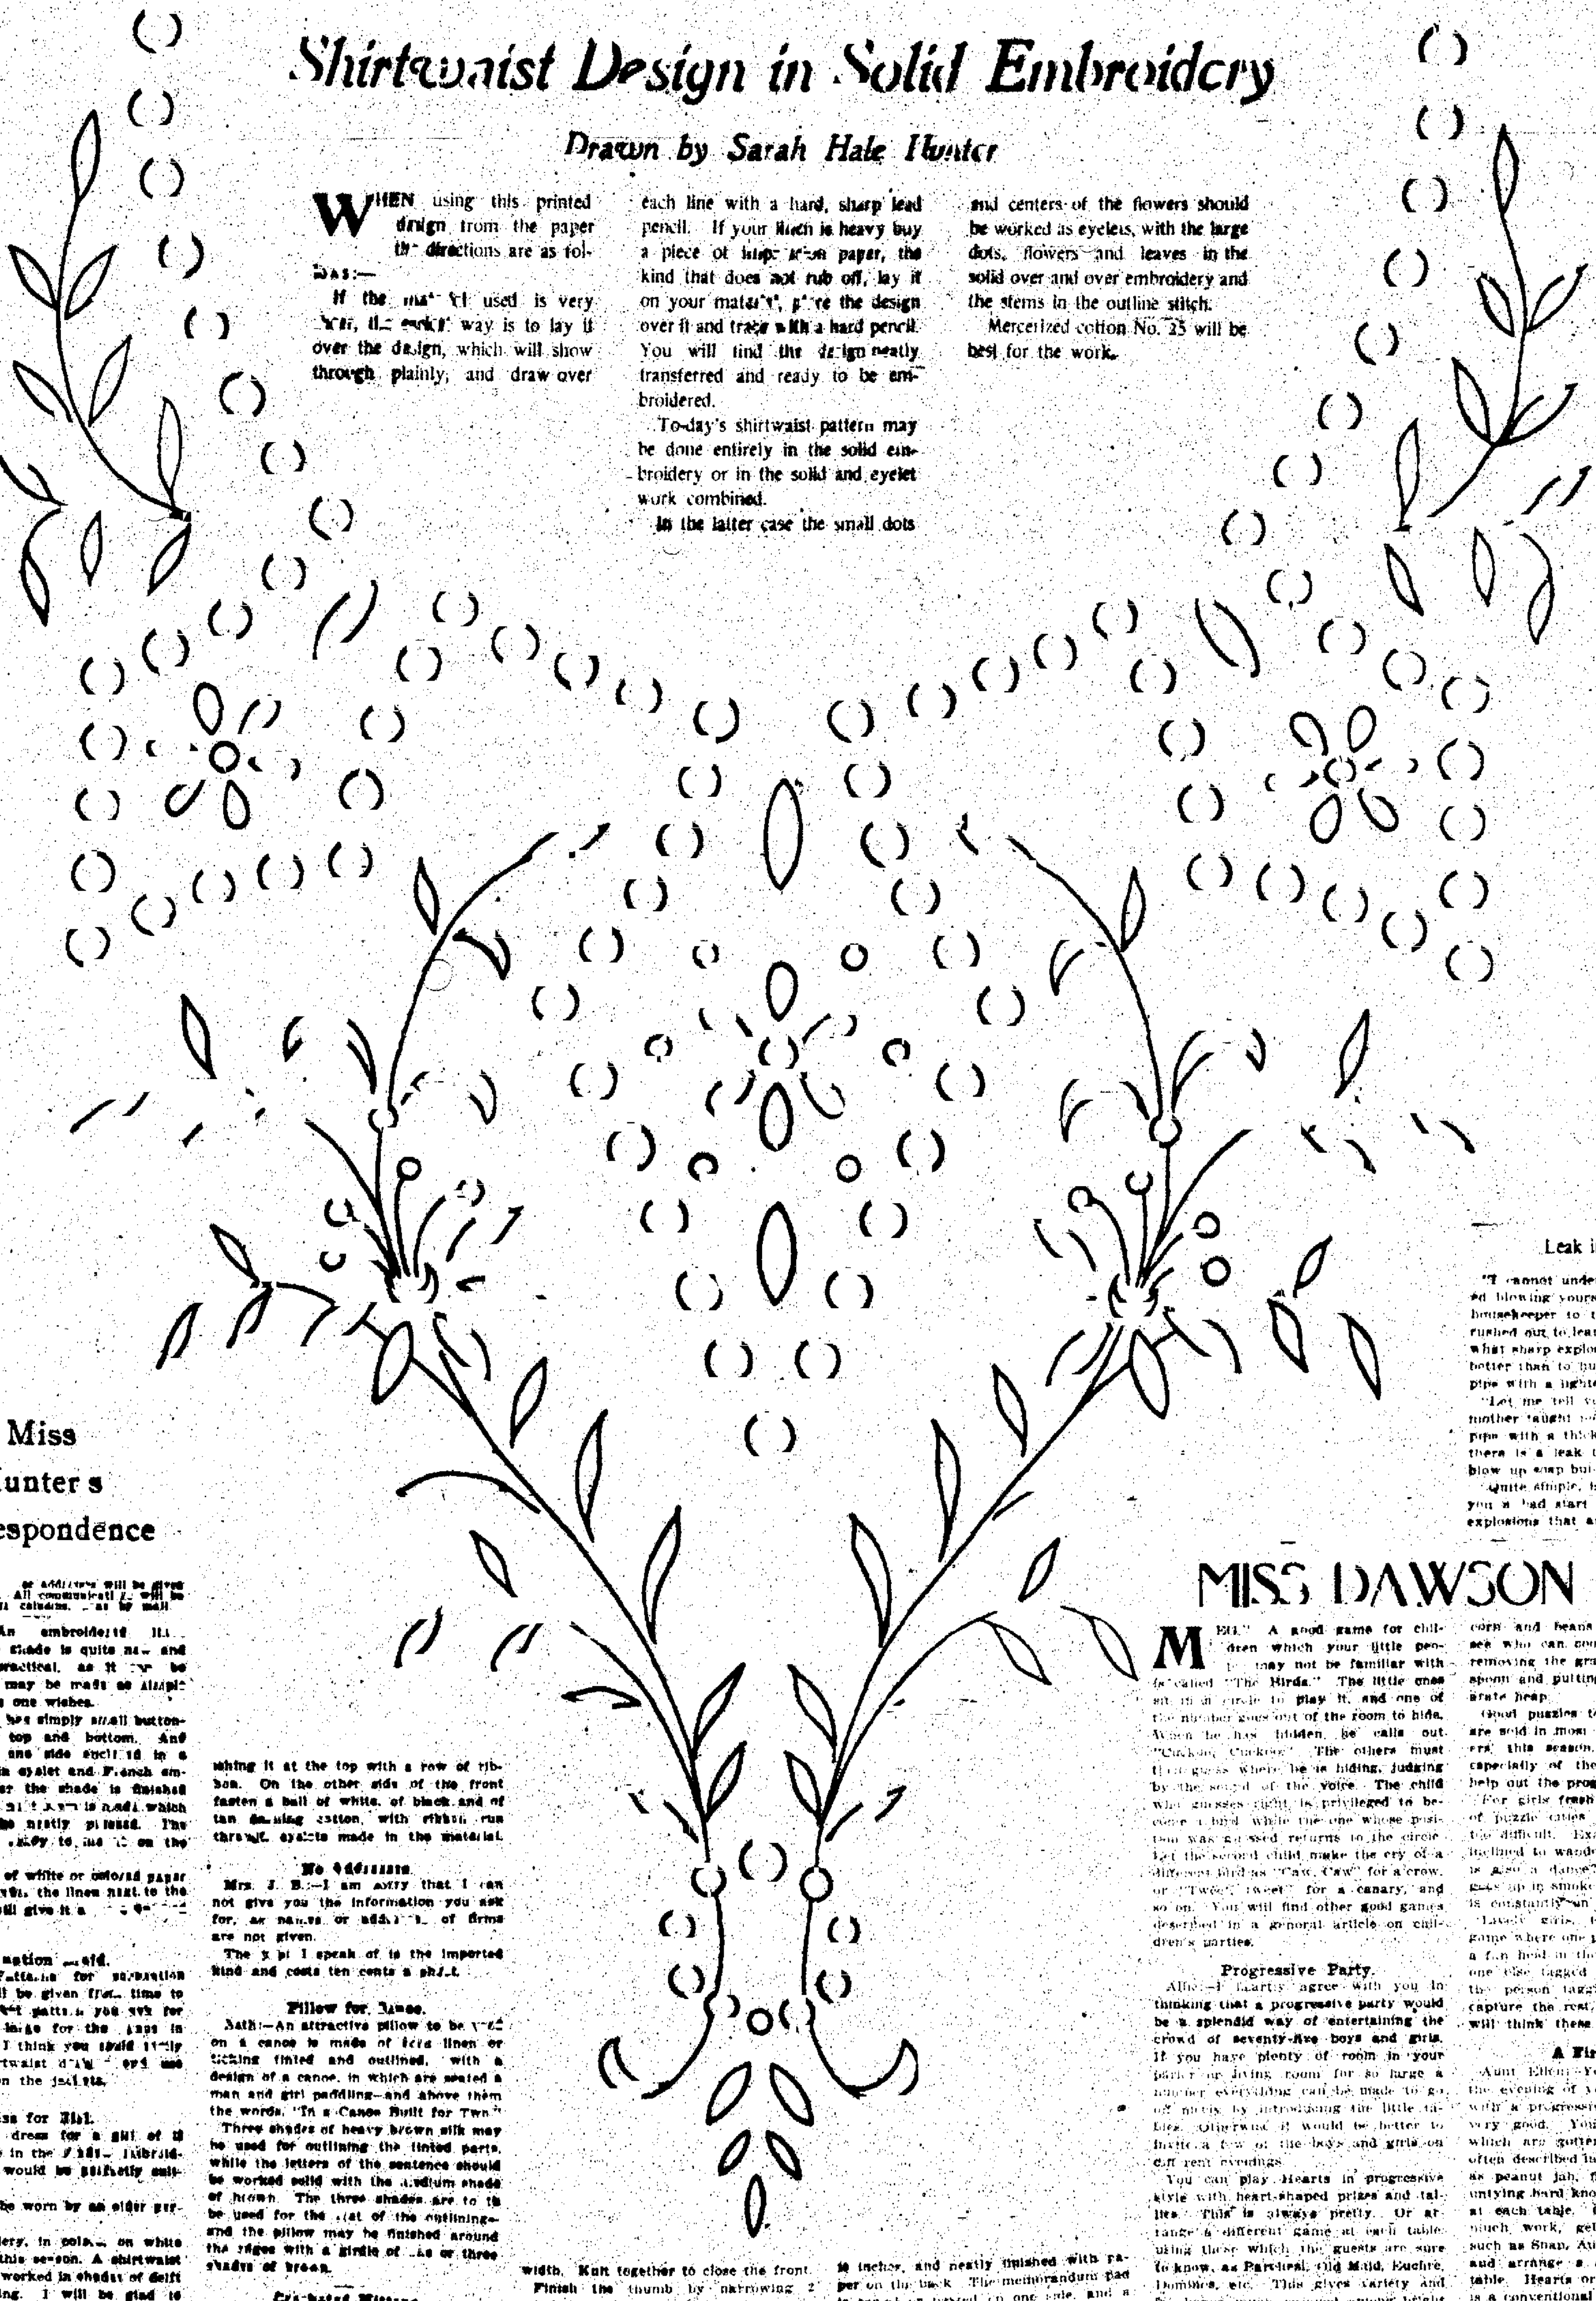

WHEN using this printed design from the paper the directions are as follows:—

If the material used is very thin, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

To-day's shirtwaist pattern may be done entirely in the solid embroidery or in the solid and eyelet work combined.

In the latter case the small dots and centers of the flowers should be worked as eyelets, with the large dots, flowers and leaves in the solid over and over embroidery and the stems in the outline stitch.

Mercerized cotton No. 25 will be best for the work.

Forget-me-not Party

By Mary Dawson

The game which the two [illegible] played together was a contest in the lore of blue, arranged in the form of questions and answers. Penny [illegible] books covered with pale blue [illegible] were distributed for this contest.

The blue questions were:—

Southey (quoted by Byron).

The bluebells of Scotland.

What river runs blue in an old song?

Blue Danube.

Where do the following familiar lines occur?

"When he comes he'll dress in blue;
That's a sign he'll marry you."

In the celebrated nursery song of "Sally Waters."

Twenty-five minutes was allowed for working out the answers. The two players working together whose list was adjudged best won prizes. The lucky girl received a pot of forget-me-nots, her companion a book of poetry bound in blue.

Leak in Gas Pipe.

"I cannot understand how you escaped blowing yourself up," said the older housekeeper to the young one, as she rushed out to learn the cause of a somewhat sharp explosion. "Don't you know better than to hunt for a leak in a gas pipe with a lighted match?

"Let me tell you a secret my grandmother taught me years ago. Paint the pipe with a thick soapsuds, and where there is a leak the escape of gas will blow up soap bubbles about the crack.

"Quite simple, isn't it, but it will save you a bad start to your nerves if not explosions that are dangerous."

G. P. B.—A dress for a girl of [illegible] done in the [illegible] embroidery, in colors, would be perfectly suitable.

Solid embroidery, in colors, on white is much worn this season. A shirtwaist of white crepe worked in shades of delft blue is charming. I will be glad to give the design you ask for as soon as [illegible] an opening.

Thank you for your kind appreciation of [illegible] work.

Embroidering Blue Linen.

A. P. F. T.:—In embroidering on light blue linen, white mercerized cotton will be most effective, although the [illegible] of blue as the material is [illegible].

[illegible] find the styles for Spring and Summer by looking at the illustrations of fashions in the papers and [illegible] magazines.

Darning Bag.

P. C. F.: A useful darning bag can be made of any [illegible] wash material, like sateen, art linen, ticking, etc., in the shape of an ordinary workbag, drawn together at the top with ribbon or cord [illegible] through a casing.

On the front of the bag or one side [illegible] a needle [illegible] made of the material [illegible] with white floss, finishing it at the top with a row of ribbon. On the other side of the front fasten a ball of white, of black and of tan darning cotton, with ribbon run through eyelets made in the material.

No Addresses.

Mrs. J. B.:—I am sorry that I can not give you the information you ask for, as names or addresses of firms are not given.

The [illegible] I speak of is the imported kind and costs ten cents a [illegible].

Pillow for Canoe.

Sath:—An attractive pillow to be used on a canoe is made of ecru linen or ticking tinted and outlined, with a design of a canoe, in which are seated a man and girl paddling—and above them the words, "In a Canoe Built for Two."

Three shades of heavy brown silk may be used for outlining the tinted parts, while the letters of the sentence should be worked solid with the medium shade of brown. The three shades are to be used for the [illegible] of the outlinings and the pillow may be finished around the edges with a girdle of [illegible] or three shades of brown.

Crocheted Mittens.

Mrs. A. R.:—I am very glad to give you the directions for crocheting a pair of ladies' mittens. And I do not think you will find them difficult.

Materials required: One hank of Spanish knitting yarn, one bone crochet hook, No. 2.

Instructions for size 6¼ glove:—

Next row plain, next increase same as before, 1 row plain, continue in this way until you have [illegible] increased stitches. Be sure to always make the increase in the same place so as to form the gusset. Chain the [illegible] stitches together to form the thumb; join, work on the [illegible] stitches for the [illegible] of hand, [illegible] plain rows, and [illegible] by drawing [illegible] stitches together to [illegible] until you have the [illegible] width. Knit together to close the front.

Finish the thumb by narrowing 2 stitches at the joint, 1 row plain, narrow 1 stitch at joint, leaving 19 stitches. Make 7 rows plain, narrow 2 stitches each row to make point.

Finish the cuff make 1 row 1 D C in each stitch; next row 1 D C, skip 1 stitch, 1 D C, stitch back in the chain you skipped, next row 1 sg. C, 1 chain stitch, 1 D C all around the mitten.

Pattern to C[illegible].

Queenie:—I will be glad to give the hat pattern you ask for and it will be published at an early date.

Those done in coronation or soutache braid will be much worn this season.

M[illegible] Pad.

Frances H. J.:—A memoranda pad which [illegible] a [illegible] will be a useful little gift to make, especially for an absent-minded friend. Select light green or white linen, with a simple design of flowers at one side, and at the top of the pad the words, "Lest we forget," in [illegible] silk. After the embroidery is finished and pressed it [illegible] be pasted over a cardboard 5 by 10 inches, and neatly finished with paper on the back. The memorandum pad is sewed or pasted on one side, and a small calendar pad on the other below the embroidery.

A pencil should be attached with a ribbon at the top, and also ribbon by which it may be hung.

Small Alphabet.

B. B. W.:—An alphabet of smaller letters will be published during the Spring, and I will be glad to draw a shirtwaist, such as you suggest, but am afraid the oval doilies would not be very popular.

Large [illegible] Designs.

Mrs. D. P. C.:—The design you ask for is too large for the space in the paper, and a quarter of it would not be practicable.

I am [illegible] I cannot give it, and would advise you to get it at any reliable art needlework shop.

D[illegible] Request[illegible].

P. H.:—I am sorry that I can not give the [illegible] you [illegible] for a [illegible] time, as they are never [illegible].

MISS DAWSON ON ENTERTAINING

MEL": A good game for children which your little people may not be familiar with is called "The Birds." The little ones sit in a circle to play it, and one of the number goes out of the room to hide. When he has hidden, he calls out "Cuckoo, Cuckoo." The others must then guess where he is hiding, judging by the sound of the voice. The child who guesses right is privileged to become a bird while the one whose position was guessed returns to the circle. Let the second child make the cry of a different bird as "Caw, Caw" for a crow, or "Tweet, tweet" for a canary, and so on. You will find other good games described in a general article on children's parties.

Progressive Party.

Alice:—I heartily agree with you in thinking that a progressive party would be a splendid way of entertaining the crowd of seventy-five boys and girls. If you have plenty of room in your parlor or living room for so large a number everything can be made to go off nicely by introducing the little tables. Otherwise it would be better to invite a few of the boys and girls on different evenings.

You can play Hearts in progressive style with heart-shaped prizes and tallies. This is always pretty. Or arrange a different game at each table, using those which the guests are sure to know, as Parcheesi, Old Maid, Euchre, Dominoes, etc. This gives variety and is always much enjoyed among bright people. Of course, you will have simple prizes, with perhaps some funny boobies to raise a laugh; college songs, if your young friends like choruses, and light refreshments.

Graduation Party.

C. E. W.:—I hope this will come in time for the little graduation party, but we usually require fully eight weeks for the printed answer. I think the girls would enjoy a program of good games, such as peanut jab, where the nuts are stabbed with hatpins from a pail of water; a riddle bee, which is where riddles old and new are read off a paper and the player first to call out the answer to each receives one point towards the prize.

Then a drawing contest, where each receives a card and pencil with, written at the top of the former, a word which the player must draw an illustration of. The cleverest drawing wins a prize, the funniest a booby. Then give each maiden a glass tumbler filled with rice, corn and beans mixed together and see who can soonest empty her glass, removing the grain one by one with a spoon and putting each kind in a separate heap.

Good puzzles to be patched together are sold in most toy shops and stationers this season. A couple of these, especially of the jigsaw variety, will help out the program.

For girls fresh from school a game of puzzle cities is also good and not too difficult. Examples: What city is inclined to wander? Rome. What city is also a dance? Boston. What city goes up in smoke? Havana. What city is constantly on the increase? Dublin.

Lively girls, too, would enjoy the game where one person tags others with a fan held in the right hand, and anyone else tagged must join hands with the person tagging him and help to capture the rest. I am sure the girls will think these frolics good fun.

A First Party.

Aunt Ellen:—Your idea of beginning the evening of your niece's first party with a progressive game seems to me very good. You can use the games which are gotten up at home, as so often described in this department, such as peanut jab, fishing for water toys, untying hard knots, etc., a different one at each table. Or, if this entails too much work, get simple card games, such as Snap, Authors, Corn and Beans, and arrange a different one at each table. Hearts or Euchre for all tables is a conventional suggestion, but always in favor.

Surprise Party.

"Miss C. D.":—Believe me, I should have been especially glad to make an exception and help out at once in your case if it were in my power. But the workings of a modern newspaper are such that it is literally impossible to answer within the fixed time limits. How beautiful is your work of taking the dear mother's place to the younger brothers and sisters and what happiness it should mean to you in after-life to have filled so high a place in the scale of usefulness. I hope that you will find time now at length for many simple frolics with your friends in order not to grow old before your time. Call on me whenever you are in doubt on any point of party giving.

As to what to serve at the surprise party, if this is yet in the future, I would offer the boys and girls just what you can conveniently provide. This is always best and most comfortable all round. Small cups of chicken soup or bouillon with water crackers is always good during cold weather. You might follow this with cold sliced tongue, potato salad and hot coffee with whipped cream. If you wish a sweet course, have home-made charlotte russe or ice cream and cake.

On the other hand hot coffee and cocoa and nice rolled sandwiches with minced tongue filling or a sweet filling such as honey are always enough if they come more within your means.

I've an idea that the bright boys and girls when they come trooping in will banish your doubts and fears as a hostess by inaugurating the fun themselves. You might however hide peanuts around the room and let the young folks hunt for them until the social ice is broken if any ice threatens. Then play Crambo, Charades, Follow My Leader, Pantomime and any of the many good games described in this department.

For Clarence M.

I regret to say that your request came much too late for a reply on the date requested. Always allow eight weeks.

Progressive Introductions.

"Izzy"—As some of the guests don't know each other, I think you would like the novel idea of progressive introductions. It is gotten up in this way: At different points through the rooms suspend placards numbered from 1 to 16. Have the figures large, in order that they can be read at a distance. Under each placard have some man and woman to act as host and hostess. The guests receive cards numbered like the placards, from 1 to 16, the numbers on them being differently grouped, of course, in every card. When the bell rings each player partakes himself to the placard bearing the number which comes first on his card. The host and hostess greet the [illegible] cordially and introduce everybody who is not acquainted. A Helpful Page for the Housewife

Useful Household Utensils

By Ellen Wise

AMONG other survivals of the stone age to be found in the modern kitchen is the handleless pan.

A contrivance for trying the patience of women is made to be placed in the oven with the roast for the family dinner. In that capacity it naturally gets far too hot for hands to hold.

The term "handleless" should be qualified a little, for the pan certainly has handles, but they are wire affairs that fold down to the side of the roaster and are not easy to grasp. Then, too, after the roaster has been in the oven for a time the handles, if they can be so called, become as hot as the rest of the pan.

In this emergency, when the time comes for rescuing the roast from the oven, women have one resource. An apron or a dish towel, hastily grabbed from its hook, is pressed into service and, always at the imminent risk of burning the hands, the roaster is lifted from the oven with only this flimsy protection between the delicate palms of the housewife and the hot pan.

It is time that something were devised for improving on so crude a method of withdrawing a roaster from the oven. It seems to have been found in a new lifter that is illustrated on this page. The lifter is made to fit pans of any ordinary size and can be fitted to the side of the roaster as quickly as the apron or dishcloth can be caught up.

The lifter has two prongs that can be raised or lowered until they engage the side of the pan. When they catch over the rim the bottom of the pan is held on two straight projections.

The weight of the pan serves to make the lifter more secure, for the pull is against the hooked top that engages the upper rim of the roaster and the greater the pull on this the firmer it co-operates with the lower arms of the lifter to keep the pan in place.

A new toaster for the gas stove will fill a much-felt want. It is perforated to permit the heat from the gas jets to rise to the bread that is to be toasted, and the business side of the toaster is provided with a network of wire so that the fire does not actually come in contact with the toast. The perforations spread the heat evenly over the toaster and so a uniform brownness is obtained.

A cake pan that requires no greasing is a useful novelty. The pan is provided with removable parts at the side, the pressing upward of which parts allows for the insertion of a knife that can be passed under the cake all around, so that the inverting of the pan causes it to drop out without any possibility of sticking.

Plumbers will not be pleased at the appearance of a new sink strainer. This is an improvement over the strainers made to fit into the corner of the sink, so that the lees of teapots, coffee pots and other receptacles can be emptied through them. It is intended to stay in place over the perforated cover of the pipe itself.

The strainer is a mesh of fine wire. A pronged handle passes through the wire and the prongs of this are pressed into the holes in the sink cover.

When the prongs are in place in the holes a turn of the handle locks the strainer, and while liquid that is poured into the sink can readily find an escape, nothing coarse enough to be seen can get through the meshes of the wire.

TO HAVE A SWEET TEAPOT

A stone or crockery teapot is the best to use if tea is made in the kitchen, as is the case when the hostess does not care for the trouble of making it on the table as is more customary.

If these pots are not in frequent use they are inclined to get musty, even when thoroughly scalded. This stale odor can be prevented if a lump of sugar is dropped into them. Do not let it stay too long without changing, as the sugar may absorb impurities.

Equally important is to keep the coffee pot in good condition. Cooks should be impressed with the necessity of not letting the grounds stand around, and of boiling out the pot in cold water after each time of using.

This is not the trouble it sounds if, as soon as the coffee pot is cleaned it is at once filled with water and returned to the back of the stove. Insist upon its being taken off the fire after the water has come to a boil, or the cook may be tempted to keep it on until the next meal and use water for the coffee that has not been freshly boiled.

Coffee pots are more easily cleaned if the coffee mixture is put in thin cheesecloth or lawn bags instead of being stirred in loosely.

KEEPING THE BATH-ROOM CLEAN

By Christine Terhune Herrick

HOW many housekeepers relish caring for the parts of the house that do not show?

How many of you, for instance, take the pains in the ... of your ... that you do in the ... of your ... or ... sitting room?

I ... will come a ... goodly number of you.

All ... hours ... with ... that they ... to not putting ... into practice.

I ... a mighty good thing to ... with, by the way. It's ... work ... and ...

... who have ... but whose consciences ... for their lack of idealism, ... of the ... to the ...

Are ... of you ... who ... the ... of the ... while to talk ...

... who own to an ... are in the minority, they ... daring and I ... who never ... of ... work with ...

If ... any way in which their ... trying it surely pays to tell of it.

In the ... then, have you the ... for ... Not only the ... much more which goes to ... cleaning than ... Have you ... the long-handled brush with which to cleanse ... the long wire ... into ... which have become a little choked; the small ... nail brush—with which ... clothe galore, ... metal work?

Then, too, have you borax in abundance and ammonia a plenty and washing soda and lye and carbolic or chloride of lime?

Does all this sound as though you were to be bankrupted by the purchase of articles of cleanliness? Not at all. They are all cheap. The cloths are rags you have garnered from the wornout family clothing; the detergents are to be bought for a trifle and pay for themselves.

Begin then at the bathroom and not on any fixed cleaning day. Part of this work must be done every day in the week if you wish to accomplish good results.

For your own sake it is to be hoped that you have a bathroom with a tiled floor. Next to that the best covering for the floor is a good linoleum and after that come bare boards, never a carpet.

Rugs you may have which can be aired and beaten regularly, but no carpet nailed down and not to be taken up except once or twice annually. Paint your bare boards, if they cannot be oiled, fill the chinks if the floor is badly laid, but don't put a carpet on it!

The floor will do if wiped up twice a week unless you have a very untidy and sloppy family, and at the same time you should ... the ... with boiling water and lye or washing soda.

Don't put your hands into the mixture, as you value the integrity of your skin, but have a stick or old mop handle will do for mixing it and use plenty of it in all the traps. This will cut the grease that is bound to accumulate on the inside of the waste pipe, bathtub and washbasin and will save you clogging and inconvenience.

If there is any ... of any sort about use the chloride of lime or the carbolic freely. In ordinary circumstances ... a week will ... for either of these.

But the things which must be done daily? In the first place, the basin and bathtub. They must never go a day without cleansing. If the tub has not been used a state of affairs my ... has difficulty in ... with hot water will serve, but if it has been used for even a single bather a scrubbing is necessary.

It ... be worth while to say here, by the way, that every bather should be taught to rinse out the tub after he or she has used it. Perhaps it may sound like a needless counsel but I wonder how many persons do it? Certainly not the average child the traces of whose presence linger behind him in a soapy and grimy ring which marks the high water mark to which his bath has attained. He will hardly get the tub clean enough to be used with satisfaction by the next bather until it has had a further cleansing but he may at least be taught to remove what some one has called the "rough dirt."

Such grease and grime as this can best be taken off by a thoroughly soaped cloth. Or you may dip the wet cloth into some one of the excellent soap powders that come, if you find anything which will do the work better than the useful borax. If the cloth with which this is applied has been first moistened with ammonia it will take the dirt off in quick measure.

Of course, you may stop here in the work of cleaning the inside of the tub. But if you have a real pride in your work you will go further and give a lovely polish to the porcelain by wiping it off with a cloth lightly dampened with kerosene.

Will it smell? Only a few minutes. Open your window after you have done—it should always stand partially open except in absolutely freezing weather—and the odor will vanish while the gloss will remain.

The oil will also remove most stains. For the more obstinate marks which refuse to yield either to the borax and ammonia or to the kerosene make a paste of whiting and lemon juice and apply with a brush. Leave it on for a couple of hours and then wash it off and go over the place with your oiled cloth.

Stained and discolored marble can also in ... be restored to whiteness by an application of this paste.

Give your wash basin the same sort of treatment that you bestow upon your tub. This is something which must never be neglected, even if the tub must get the go-by. Anyone who will pass his hand over the inside of a basin in the morning before the scrubbing has been done will have no further doubt of the absolute necessity for scouring the greasy and befouled surface.

The faucets and other metal work about the bathroom should also have a daily touch. If when you are washing your basin each morning you will wipe off the metal work with that same kerosened rag there will be little necessity for a periodical scrubbing. If nickel is spotted it is said that it can be cleaned with mutton tallow, but I cannot vouch for this. If the daily wiping is not neglected there will be rare need for more vigorous cleansing.

Do I need to say anything about the woodwork of the bathroom and the importance of keeping it free from dust? A damp cloth will do ..., too. Never let dust accumulate in the bathroom, on the floor or anywhere else.

See, too, that the towels are never folded and hung up while damp, but spread out to dry before they are put back in their places on the hooks or racks.

I hope you have a pretty bathroom. Once upon a time such a possession would have been an exception; now it is becoming happily the rule. An airy, well lighted bathroom with tiled floor and walls, porcelain tub and basin and bright nickel faucets is a pride and a joy. When to it are added a roomy medicine cabinet in which extra soap, etc., can be stowed, a glass shelf for holding bottles, tooth brush holders and drinking glasses in a rack, individual soap dishes and plenty of nickel or glass rods for towels, the room is complete.

Even lacking certain frills, good substitutes can be obtained. A discarded curtain pole in wood or metal makes an admirable towel rack, a wooden shelf may be put in place of the glass shelf, hanging ... soap dishes are cheap and should be plenty, as should be drinking glasses or cups.

With the plainest bathroom it is a simple matter to have the chief adornment of perfect cleanliness, and you who have to put up with the disadvantages in the shape of an old house with an out-of-date bathroom, may have the more pride in making success from unpromising materials.

Cultivate an enthusiasm in this part of your house, see how attractive you can make it and be ... that your comfort in it will be quite equal to anything you may feel in the show quarters of the home.

An Attractive Exchange.

Dear Madam: Would you kindly forward my address to the lady who has a hobby so that I might communicate with her about her stamp collection. I have not what she would want in exchange for it, but am an artist and have oils, water colors, china and pencil drawings, which she could see at my studio. A foreign little boy just asked me if I could send him some stamps from here, so voila la chance! Also, I have the most delicious recipe for preserved pumpkin. It is Russian, and we living in eastern Europe could never be one Winter without these preserved chips, so if you will kindly send me the address of the one that wishes the recipe I will forward it to her.

O. L.

I regret to say that the correspondent who offered stamps has given them all away in response to earlier applications. Is there not ... one else owning stamps who would like to take advantage of the offer made by the artist, either of some of her work or of the Russian pumpkin recipe? I hold the address of "O. L." and will send it to anyone inclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope with her request for the name. I cannot undertake to answer applications for addresses when unaccompanied by postage.

DISHES FOR COLD WEATHER

By Marion Harris Neil M. C. A.

COLD, damp days, besides being unpleasant in themselves, bring in their train chills, coughs and influenza. Now, it is not my province to write a homily on circulation, but it is my plain duty to point out to you that at this season you must alter the nature of the food supplied to your family.

Clear soups, cold entrees of meat and fish, blanc manges, jellies and so forth are just the thing for the orthodox Summer day, but are out of place now.

Varieties of thick soups, such as oxtail, mock turtle and the lonely but ever popular pea and lentil purees should now be well patronized and will do untold good in helping to fortify the system against the scourge influenza. Fragile children and adults with delicate chests, chilblains and other cold weather trials must have fat given to them in every possible form.

Here puddings come to our aid, well boiled or better still, steamed, and mixed with a liberal allowance of finely chopped beef suet. These are literally invaluable. ... pastry is always liked and is nourishing if correctly made. It is more wholesome now than during the Summer and is a most convenient medium for serving all kinds of savory and sweet ... The varieties of pastes, such as spaghetti and macaroni with the addition of cheese, fulfill all our requirements as regards nutriment, flavor and tempting appearance.

Casserole of Mutton.

Two pounds neck of mutton, three-quarters of a pint of stock, two onions, two ... tomatoes, ... one tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, three ..., one glass of sherry wine, one tablespoonful of sauce, salt and pepper, one ounce of preserved cherries.

Wipe the meat carefully and cut it into neat small joints. Melt the butter in a saucepan, put in the meat and fry it a good brown color on both sides, remove the meat, shake in the flour and brown it. Add the stock and stir until it boils.

Put the meat in the casserole, add the sliced onions and tomatoes, some neatly cut pieces of carrot and turnip, the sauce and a little salt. Put on the lid and simmer the stew for about two hours until the meat is quite tender.

Meanwhile, with a round vegetable cutter cut out balls of carrot and turnip, using the reddest part of the former. Cook these in boiling salted water until tender, drain off the water and keep them hot.

Season the stew with salt and pepper and stir in the sherry and sauce. Arrange the meat as nicely as possible on the casserole and garnish with the balls of carrot and turnip, also the cherries. Serve very hot.

Chicken and Rice.

Take a chicken trussed for boiling and put it into a saucepan with half a pound of parboiled rice, twelve whole peppers and one teaspoonful of salt, add enough boiling water to cover the chicken and rice.

Let it simmer gently over a slow fire for three-quarters of an hour.

When cooked remove to a hot dish, add to the rice pepper, salt, one gill of cream, a little grated nutmeg, paprika and one tablespoonful of butter.

Make this mixture very hot, boiling for ten minutes, garnish as neatly as possible round the chicken and serve immediately.

Turnip Pudding.

Wash and peel two large turnips and scrape the same weight of carrots. Cut into slices and throw into boiling water with a little salt, boil until tender. Then rub them through a sieve, add pepper, salt, paprika, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a pinch of sugar.

When well mixed and smooth add two well-beaten eggs and one heaping tablespoonful of fine white bread crumbs. Pour into a well-buttered mold, cover with buttered paper and stand in boiling water in a baking tin.

Cook in a moderate oven for an hour. Turn out and garnish round with hot mashed potatoes, or with boiled ... that have been fried in a little hot butter. Serve hot with white sauce.

Fig Pudding.

Six ounces of figs, six ounces of bread crumbs, quarter of a pound of brown sugar, half a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one large apple, quarter pound of flour, quarter pound of suet, two eggs and a little grated nutmeg.

Boil the milk, pour it over the bread crumbs, stir in the flour and the chopped suet, the eggs well beaten, the apple and figs cut into small pieces, also the sugar, nutmeg and baking powder.

Pour into buttered mold, cover with a buttered paper, and steam for two and a half hours. Serve with white sauce with one or two figs cut up in it.

Golden Pudding.

Quarter of a pound of bread crumbs, quarter of a pound of chopped suet, one egg, quarter of a teaspoonful of baking soda, pinch of salt, quarter pound of flour, quarter pound of brown sugar, five tablespoonfuls of orange marmalade, two tablespoonfuls of water.

Mix in a basin the bread crumbs, flour, sugar and suet, add the marmalade mixed with the egg well beaten and the soda dissolved in the water.

Pour into a well-buttered mold, cover with a buttered paper and steam for two and a half hours. Serve with hot milk.

Making Wax Hat Pins at Home

SOME of the latest hatpins are fashioned from ordinary sealing wax, and the effect closely resembles Venetian glass wax.

While the task does not call for delicate handling, it must yet be carried out deftly and artistically. There is much scope for ingenuity in the ... of the colors and the uniqueness of the design.

The cheap black and white glass headed hatpins are quite suitable, and the process is not an expensive one, as only the outer part of the pin is coated with the wax.

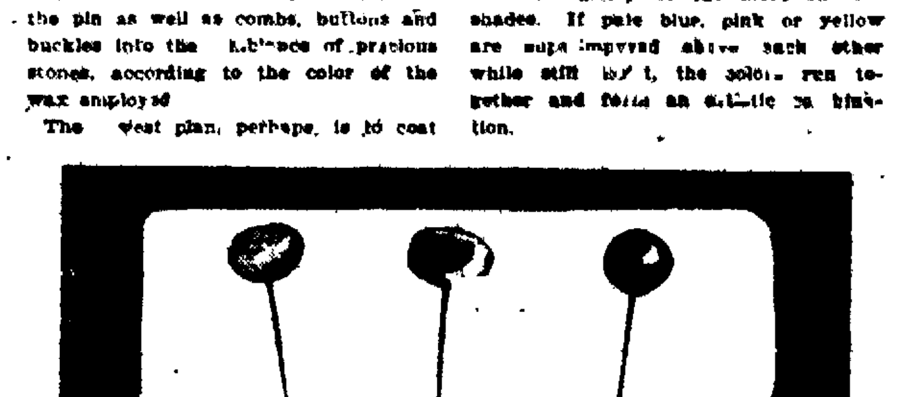

Good results are obtained by the use of three sticks of wax assorted colors and a stick gold ... wax.

Select one of the colors and heat the wax near a candle. Do not let the flame touch the wax, or it will make it black. Rub it off on the glass knob of the pin until you have sufficient to make as large a head as you require; then gently heat near the candle and roll on the palm of your left hand till perfectly smooth and round, ... your head to prevent burning.

Now heat the gold ... wax and dab little spots of it on the ball here and there. Make them smooth with your hand, holding near the candle to soften any ... of the surface and to glaze the ball, which now looks like glass.

Another method is to allow the wax to drip on the ball in such a way that it forms twists, curious shapes, flowers, birds, etc., or transforms the head of the pin as well as combs, buttons and buckles into the semblance of precious stones, according to the color of the wax employed.

The ... plan, perhaps, is to coat the head with the ... red variety of sealing wax for a foundation, and then gradually drop in the form of balls a variety of the more fanciful shades. If pale blue, pink or yellow are ... above each other while still soft, the colors run together and form an artistic combination.

A FEW WAX HAT PINS

If something more fanciful is desired, then plastic wax may be manipulated by means of a watch key, a spill of wood, a pair of pincers, a seal or anything practically which will have a pleasing impress.

A blackberry effect may be obtained by dotting the wax all over with the point of a watch key.

Buttons may be treated in much the same fashion, and button molds may also be pressed into service as pretty hatpins. Should there be an opening in the center, fill it up with a mixture of glue and sawdust, or failing that, mucilage and plaster of paris. When this is completed the head of the pin should be driven in as near the half as possible.

Let the coating harden, and then comes the chance of displaying skill, taste and ingenuity. The molds may be coated so thickly with a paste of plaster of Paris, that pearl beads or the like may be embedded so that when dry they will be found quite secure. Another method is to run the head of the pin through the hole in the mold, and cover with wax of a contrasting shade to the other part, gilded, silvered or crowned by a bead.

YOUTHFUL AND BECOMING HATS

HE tendency toward simplicity in coiffure, which was noticeable in the great fashions taken up with even greater enthusiasm with regard to the new Spring models.

As regards the trimming on the new hats, plumage and floral effects figure equally prominently, and up to the present moment flowers and feathers are exceedingly beautiful this season, and there are many smart novelties in both these lines that is more than difficult to choose between the two.

The first illustration gives a description of a smart new model. The shape is of fine, pressed Milan, in a delicate tint of green with the latest in hydrangea tints is composed by a conspicuously low, very broad crown, straight from headsize to top, and a colorfully braid, rigid brim, which presents a perfectly straight and level line when seen in profile view.

The width of the crown is splendidly in keeping with the vast expanse of the brim, and the height is made to correspond, thanks to the smart arrangement of the garniture.

Large, irregularly joined touffes of big-petaled Parma violets in the natural soft shade of mauve are grouped about the brim, alternating with large clusters of tight little rosebuds in soft, pale pink and creamy white, both flowers being supplemented with a lot of foliage in the natural light and sombre tones of green.

Entirely different in development and outline is Model No. 2, a bold, daring Rembrandt imitation, highly picturesque and immensely effective, and developed in a smart combination of black and white.

The fine black Milan shape has as dominating feature, a brim of moderate breadth, which droops softly from the headsize on three sides, while the fourth (the left) is diagonally rolled up to form a broad, gracefully curved revers. Through this upward rolling of the brim the smoothly applied facing of soft, pure white silk, with its narrow band of black Milan, is exposed to view.

Simple, but extremely rich, is the garniture. It is effected by three superb ostrich plumes, two are of the same (enormous) length, while the third is considerably shorter than these. These plumes are so arranged over the side crown in the centre front that they slope up high beyond the crown at the left side and droop over the revers at the left side, as well as over the back of the brim in a delightfully effective, graceful movement, imparting their beauty and charm to the entire hat.

Beautiful, long, silky, paradise aigrettes, the really "classy," high-priced kind, forms the sole trimming on the charming model illustrated in photograph No. 3.

They are in a gorgeous tone of Bosphore (Bosphore, the exquisite, soft new water blue) and are joined so as to form a superb sweep of enormous proportions, but infinitely soft and graceful in effect about the crown of the fine, cream-colored Milan shape they decorate.

The crown of this shape is characteristically wide in circumference.

The brim is comperatively narrow in comparison with the crown, and it is outlined with a wide border of Milan in the deepest tone of Bosphore, so as to harmonize with the garniture.

Illustration No. 4 demonstrates another model, embellished with floral trimming. It consists of a rather low, flat tymbal-shaped crown, and a brim of increased width in front and back, where it droops in cape line style supple novelty straw braid in pure white and showing a high, beautiful gloss, was selected.

Little bunches of small Spring Asters are tied up with springs of white and mauve lilacs and joined to the thick wreath of ivy leaves, which encircles the crown. No daintier and more springlike garniture could possibly be selected, and none that brings out the full value of the smart contrasts of this model to greater advantage when in a becoming manner.
